shall be deemed to be a nuisance to be dealt with under the provisions of this chapter:

Provided that no nuisance shall be deemed to have been committed in respect of any accumulation or deposit necessary for the effectual carrying on of any business, trade, or manufacture, if it be proved to the satisfaction of the Court that the accumulation or deposit has not been kept longer than is necessary for the purposes of the business, trade or manufacture, and that the best available means have been taken for preventing injury or danger thereby to the public health.

(2) If the Commissioners or Health Officer or a Sanitary Inspector have or has reasonable grounds for believing that a nuisance exists in any premises, they or he may make an inspection of such premises at any hour, when the operations suspected to cause nuisance are believed to be in progress or are usually carried on or when the special conditions suspected to cause the nuisance are believed to exist, and may cause such work to be done as may be necessary for an effectual examination of the said premises, including the opening of the ground or surface, where necessary, and the testing of the drains.

(3) Where the ground or surface has been opened and no nuisance is found to exist, the Commissioners shall restore the premises at their own cost.

(b) where the author of the nuisance cannot be found and it is clear that the nuisance does not arise or continue by the act or default or sufferance of the occupier or owner or occupier of the building or premises, the Commissioners shall remove the same and may do what is necessary to prevent the recurrence thereof.

Procedure in case owner fails to comply with notice.

436. (1) If the person on whom a notice to remove a nuisance has been served as aforesaid fails to comply with any of the requirements thereof within the time specified, or if the nuisance, although removed since the service of the notice, is in the opinion of the Commissioners likely to recur on the same premises, the Commissioners shall cause a complaint relating to such nuisance to be made before a Magistrate, and such Magistrate shall thereupon issue a summons requiring the person on whom the notice was served to appear before him. [Cf. P. H. Act, 1875, ss. 95-96; and P. H. Act (Scotland).]

(See sections 298, 299, 303, 304, 305, 307, 308, 312, 313, 314, 315 and 316.)

Rules as to the use of building-sites and the execution of building work.

Section A.—Building sites.

[Cf. C. M. Act sch. XVII; Rules framed under Act V of 1920; Ben. Act III of 1881, ss. 233 and 244C.]

1. No piece of land shall be used as a building site unless the Chairman is satisfied—

(a) that the site is fit to be built upon from sanitary and engineering points of view;

(b) that it is well-drained or is capable of being well-drained, and that the owner will take the necessary steps to drain it; and

(c) that where the site is within thirty feet of a tank, the owner will take such measures as shall prevent any risk of the drainage from such building passing into the tank.

Section B.—Buildings generally (other than huts).

PART I.

2. Except with the written permission of the Chairman the foundation of buildings other than huts shall rest on natural ground.

3. The spread of the foundation shall be such that the pressure on the soil, taking into account the load on the floors and terrace roof (if any) shall not in any case exceed a maximum to be laid down by the Commissioners at a meeting with the approval of the Local Government.

4. The depths of the foundation shall be such as the Chairman may approve.

5. The plinth of every such building, except in the case of motor garages and coach houses, shall be at least one foot six inches above the level of the centre of the nearest street.

6. The plinth of stables and cowsheds shall be at least one foot above such level.

7. The walls of every such building shall be constructed upon proper footings.

8. The outer walls of every such building shall be constructed of brick or other substance of a hard and incombustible nature.

9. The walls of every such building shall be properly bonded.

10. If such building has more than one storey, every wall shall be of such thickness as the Chairman may consider necessary to ensure safety, regard being had to the height of the building, the materials of which it is constructed and the purpose for which it is intended to be put.

Schedule VI.—Rules as to the use of building-sites and the execution of building work.—Rules 11-20.

11. The floors of every such building shall be so constructed as to carry safely the maximum load, the allowance for live-load not being less than fifty-six pounds per square foot.

12. Every beam and girder in such building shall be supported by a breadth of brickwork, stone or other solid substance sufficient to secure stability.

13. The bearing of every beam or girder on a wall shall not, without the written permission of the Chairman, be less than three-fourths of the thickness of such wall.

14. No timber or woodwork in such a building shall be placed—

(a) in any wall or chimney-breast nearer than nine inches to the inside of any flue, stove-pipe or chimney-opening, and

(b) under any chimney-opening within 15 inches from the upper surface of the hearth thereof.

15. Every terraced roof shall be constructed to carry such load, not being less than forty pounds per square foot, in addition to its own weight as may be approved by the Chairman.

PART II.

16. The lowest floor of every building erected or re-constructed from the ground level shall be constructed at such a level as shall permit of such building being effectually drained and of the drainage being led into an existing or proposed public drain.

17. No building shall be erected or raised to a greater height than sixty feet measured from the level of the centre of the street in front—

(a) in the case of a pitched roof, up to the tie-beam of the roof, and

18. In the case of a pitched roof, the roof above that height shall rise at an angle of not more than forty-five degrees.

19. In the case of a flat roof, no parapet shall be constructed more than three feet above the maximum height specified in rule 17.

20. If the width of the street does not exceed twenty-six feet, such building shall not be erected or raised to a height greater than one and a half times the width of such street.

Schedule VI.—Rules as to the use of building-sites and the execution of building work.—Rules 21-29.

21. If the width of the street exceeds twenty-six feet, but does not exceed forty feet, such building shall not be erected or raised to a height greater than forty feet.

22. If the width of the street exceeds forty feet, such building shall not be erected or raised to a height greater than the width of such streets.

23. Where such building abuts upon more than one street, its height shall be regulated by the wider of such streets so far as it abuts upon such wider street, and also to a distance of eighty feet from such wider street so far as it abuts upon the narrower of such streets.

24. If the face of such building is set back from the street at any height not exceeding the height specified in rule 17, such building may be erected or raised to a height greater than that so specified, but not so that any portion of such building shall intersect any of a series of imaginary straight lines drawn from the line of set-back, in the direction of the portion set-back, at an angle of forty-five degrees with the horizontal.

25. Notwithstanding anything contained in the foregoing rules any house which has been demolished may, within a period of two years, from the date of its demolition, be re-erected to a height not exceeding its original height, provided that the onus of proving the height of the original building prior to demolition shall lie upon the person applying for sanction to re-build.

26. Every interior courtyard shall be raised at least one foot above the level of the centre of the nearest street, so as to admit of easy drainage into such street.

27. Every house, if this in the opinion of the Chairman practicable, shall be provided with a secondary means of egress in case of fire.

With respect of roofs, floors and staircases.

28. The flat and roof of such building, and every turret, dormer, lantern-light, skylight, or other erection placed on the flat or roof of such building, shall be externally covered with slates, tiles, metal, or other incombustible materials, except as regards any door, door-frame, window or window-frame of any such turret, dormer, lantern-light, skylight, or other erection.

29. In every new public building, the floor of every lobby, corridor, passage and landing which is not intended solely as a means of access to any private apartment, and all the supports of every such floor shall be constructed of stone or other incombustible or fire-resisting materials, and shall be of adequate strength.

In every new building containing separate sets of chambers or offices or rooms constructed or intended or adapted to be tenanted by different persons, and which shall exceed fifty thousand feet in cubic content, the floor or every lobby, corridor, passage and landing and every flight of stairs in any staircase in such building, and all the supports of every such floor and flight of stairs shall be constructed of stone or other fire-resisting material, and shall be of adequate strength and the principal staircase and landings of such building shall be enclosed with walls, not less than nine inches in thickness, constructed of good, hard, sound, well-burnt bricks, stone, or other hard and incombustible materials, properly bonded and solidly put together.

Section C.—Dwelling-houses and other domestic buildings (other than huts).

34. The total area covered by all the buildings on any site used for a dwelling-house shall not exceed two-thirds of the total area of the site, and the area so covered shall form part of the site, and no building or part of a building shall be erected so as to encroach upon the area so left vacant:

35. There shall be at the back of every domestic building an open space—

(a) extending along the entire width of the building;

(b) exclusively belonging to such building;

(c) free from any erection thereon above the level of the ground, except a water-closet, earth-closet, or ash-pit; and

(d) not less than ten feet in width from every part of the back of such building to the opposite boundary of the premises.

36. If the height of such building be not less than thirty feet, the width of such open space shall not be less than fifteen feet, and if such height exceed forty-five feet the width shall not be less than twenty-five feet.

37. This rule shall not apply where the back of a building abuts on a public square or street or a place dedicated to public use and not likely to be built upon not less than six feet in width, but in such cases, the height of the building shall nevertheless, in accordance with the provisions of rules 17 to 25 be regulated by the width of the public square, street or place on which it abuts.

38. For the purposes of this rule, the back of a building shall be deemed to be that face of the building which is furthest from any street at the side of which the building is situated:

Provided that, where a building is situated at the side of more than one street, the back of the building shall, unless the Chairman otherwise direct, be deemed to be that face of the building which is furthest from the widest of such streets.

39. If any person desires to erect a domestic building upon a site which is irregular or is of such a nature that it is impracticable to provide an open space in the rear of the building of the dimensions prescribed by rule 35 or rule 36, the Chairman may relax the provisions of those rules:

Provided that—

(a) such open space shall be left as the Chairman may consider practicable, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, and

(b) not more than two-thirds of the total area of the site shall be occupied by buildings.

40. (1) If either side of a domestic building is not attached to the adjacent building, and if such side does not abut on a public square or street which is not less than six feet in width, there shall be between the buildings an open space extending along the entire length of such side and forming part of the side of the said domestic building:

Provided that attachment of any building to the adjacent building shall not be allowed (except with the permission of the Chairman) if either of the buildings is a dwelling-house.

(2) The minimum distance across such space from every part of the said domestic building to the boundary line of the land or building immediately opposite such part shall be—

(a) six feet, if there is a building next to such boundary line or within two feet of it, or

(b) four feet, if there is an open space of two feet or more on either side of such boundary line:

Provided that, where there is a public street which is less than six feet wide by the side of the site, the owner may, by giving to the Commissioners free of charge such land as will make the street six feet wide, be exempted from leaving further side space under this rule.

41. Every room used or intended to be used for purposes of human habitation—

(a) shall be in every part not less than nine feet in height, measured from the floor to the under-side of the beam on which the roof rests;

Schedule VI.—Rules as to the use of building-sites and the execution of building work.—Rules 42-45.

(b) shall have a superficial area of not less than eighty square feet; and

(c) shall be provided, for purposes of ventilation, with doors or windows opening directly into the external air or into an open verandah.

42. (1) Every building used or intended to be used for purposes of human habitation shall be so constructed that every room therein shall have at least one side abutting for the whole of its length (which shall, in no case, be less than eight feet) on an open space, either external or internal. The internal open space shall, in no case, be less than eight feet across in any direction. The external open space shall, in no case, be less than eight feet across in any direction, except when such open space abuts for the whole of its length on a street or other public space which is not less than fifteen feet across in any direction.

(2) A building shall not be held to contravene sub-rule (1) of this rule if one side of a room abuts on an internal or external verandah, provided that the verandah in its turn abuts for the whole of its length on an open space and that the width of such open space (not being less than eight feet) is double the width of the verandah.

(3) Every open space, external or internal, required by sub-rule (1) of this rule, shall be free and shall be kept free, from any erection thereon and shall be open to the sky.

(4) The side of every such room abutting on an external or internal open space or an external or internal verandah shall have at least one-fifth of its area occupied by doors, windows or ventilators, but, in no case, shall the area so occupied be less than twenty-four square feet. Where, in the opinion of the Chairman, it shall be considered necessary, additional ventilators of a type approved by the Chairman shall be provided in the remaining sides of such room. Such ventilators shall communicate directly with the open air.

Section D.—Applications for approval of sites for, and for permission to construct or reconstruct, buildings other than huts.

43. Every application for approval of a site for a building and for permission to execute the work of constructing or reconstructing such building shall be submitted in the form given in Form A attached to these rules (to be supplied by the Chairman free of charge).

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

INTRODUCTORY.

The Bengal Municipal Act (III of 1884) has been in force for nearly 40 years, and though still wide enough in its scope to meet the needs of many towns in Bengal, the Act naturally fails to reflect or provide for several new developments in municipal administration which merit the attention of even petty municipalities. It is true that there is a wide gulf between the needs and still more the resources of small communities, such as Rajpur, Taki or Baduria and of urban areas such as Howrah, Darjeeling or Dacca and the elaborate provisions, which the latter require, may appear incongruous with the realities of many semi-rural municipalities. The Decentralization Commission indeed proposed that "a number of petty municipalities which will not be fit to exercise the large powers" suggested for municipalities in general might be placed under local committees styled town panchayets (as distinguished from village boards or unions) and be "administered as embryonic municipalities, subject to such portions of the provincial Municipal Acts as the Local Government may, in each case, see fit to extend to them".

There is, however, in Bengal a widespread reluctance to surrender the form of municipal government where it already exists, and after careful consideration Government are of opinion that no harm is likely to ensue—whether by abuse of powers or through inability to adapt to semi-rural conditions a too elaborate machinery—if a modern Municipal Act is placed in operation in all areas which at present enjoy a municipal constitution.

The gradual elaboration of the Village Self-Government Act will enable it to meet the needs of growing non-municipal villages for some years to come, while the present Bill restricts the operation of certain provisions to more advanced municipalities notified in this behalf and enables (clause 12) the Local Government to except a municipality or a part of it from the operation of any other provisions which appear unsuited to the circumstances of such municipality.

The somewhat inconvenient arrangement of the present Act, whereby the provisions regarding the constitution, procedure and various simple measures of sanitation and improvement apply to all municipalities, while other parts containing important administrative provisions apply when expressly extended, had its basis in the existence of the four diverse types or rather grades of municipalities which in 1876 were first brought within the scope of a single Act.

Under the present Bill, the main body of the municipal law will automatically apply proprio vigore to all municipalities, and it is merely the elaborate provisions regarding streets and buildings which require to be expressly extended. This method of treatment enables the draftsman to deal in one chapter with each important phase of municipal administration. By the insertion of a special chapter containing those provisions which the special conditions of hill municipalities render necessary, it is possible to repeal the Darjeeling Act (I of 1900) and to avoid the inconvenient interleaving of provisions peculiar to Darjeeling with other clauses of the Bill.

The case for amendment.

The Local Government in 1905 addressed the Government of India on the subject of the amendment of Act III of 1884. Their proposals for the most part aimed at removing legal difficulties and ambiguities and perfecting the working of existing provisions by the addition of new clauses which experience had shown to be necessary. Other proposals were designed to improve the constitution of appellate committees, to delegate to Divisional Commissioners certain powers now vested in the Local Government, to empower riverside municipalities to regulate the traffic of boats within municipal limits, to authorize the levy of a tax on dogs and rickshaws, to legalize an increase in the rate on holdings for the purpose of guaranteeing interest on capital expended on the construction of light railways or tramways, to justify the expenditure of municipal funds on the construction and maintenance of hostels and finally to introduce a trades and professions tax.

It will be seen that these proposals for the most part do not raise issues of the first importance. They received the general approval of the Government of India, which, however, referred to the defective character of the Bengal Municipal Act, and suggested that it was preferable "to re-enact the Act as a whole on more modern lines". The Legislative Department (Bengal) strongly supported this suggestion, pointing out that the Act was loosely drawn, that it had been extensively amended by Acts IV of 1894 and II of 1896, slightly amended by Act III of 1886 and Act V of 1897, and partially repealed in six other Acts. It was urged that a consolidating Bill instead of an amending Bill should be prepared. This contention has much greater weight in present times.

Two forces have been at work. In the first place, the range of municipal activities in all parts of the world has vastly expanded; secondly, and as a corollary, the more precise devolution of functions and powers from the State to local bodies has become essential.

In India, Government, in accordance with the changing times, have already increased the independence of local bodies by the abolition of official Chairmen, by giving municipalities a free hand in respect of their budgets and generally by the relaxation of internal control. But it is only by liberally supplementing the present law that the new conception of municipal administration—the improvement of insanitary buildings and areas, the prevention of epidemic disease, the control of the sale of food-stuffs, the improved registration of vital statistics, child-welfare, etc.,—can find a place in the municipal administration of mufassal Bengal.

Main features of the Bill.

(a) Constitution of municipalities, franchise, etc.

Schedules I and II of the present Act, providing for the appointing by Government of all the Commissioners and of the Chairman, are abolished and the proportion of elected Commissioners—two-thirds of the whole body of Commissioners in the old Act—is increased in the case of the average municipality to three-fourths, while in certain advanced municipalities, named in a schedule of the Bill, the elected proportion is raised to four-fifths.

In view of the administrative difficulties which frequently arise in the formation of a new municipality, Government retain power in such cases to nominate all the Commissioners for a period not exceeding one year.

To safeguard the rights of minorities under this wide extension of the elective system, Government take power to alter the number of Commissioners to provide specially by rule for the representation of minorities, especially Muhammadans, and in the case of industrial areas to increase the number of nominated Commissioners or to provide for the proper representation of the industry and of other inhabitants not directly connected with the industry by special electoral constituencies in each case.

Power has been taken to widen the franchise by enabling the Local Government at any time to fix and modify the minimum amount of rates and taxes, the payment of which will qualify for a vote.

Members of joint families who hold in severalty property on which they pay rates or taxes in their own name will enjoy a personal vote in addition to the vote which they share jointly with other members of the family and exercise through a selected representative.

Provision has been made against the commission of corrupt practices or the using of undue influence, and a special procedure is prescribed for the prompt disposal of election disputes.

The provisions regulating the election of a Chairman, the tenure of his office and that of the Vice-Chairman and Commissioners are more precise and detailed than those of the present Act, with the object of preventing such irregularities as now occur.

Commissioners before assuming office are required to make an oath or affirmation of allegiance to the Crown; the oath will not bar any person from attempting by constitutional means to obtain changes in the established order.

Statutory recognition is given to the formation of standing committees. With an extension of the committee system on these lines, it has been considered unnecessary to retain any provision for ward committees which moreover have not hitherto been formed in many municipalities.

(b) Control by Government.

(Chapter XXVII).—By increasing the elective element in municipal boards, Government have abandoned its old system of "internal control". The popular voice is thereby given greater freedom in the direction of policy and the details of administration. At the same time, a very large extension of powers over the property and personal rights of the rate-payers is given to the popular representatives. The function of the State is to secure the proper exercise of discretion by the Commissioners without undue interference with the principle of local autonomy, and this can only be effected by vesting Government with adequate powers of "external control".

Section 64 of the present Act provides, in the event of specific default on the part of the Commissioners, for Government appointing the Magistrate to perform at the cost of the municipal fund that duty in which default has been made.

Where there is persistent default, Government may under section 65 of the present Act take the extreme step of superseding the Commissioners.

These powers are retained in the Bill (clauses 533 and 537). Experience has, however, shown that it is rather in respect of the management of a particular department than of general administration that the intervention of Government is required and power is therefore taken under clause 531 to place such a department temporarily under Government control instead of having resort to the drastic measure of supersession.

It has again been found that serious defects from time to time occur in the management and maintenance of the three primary services of an urban community, viz., drainage or sewerage works, lighting and water-works. At present Government can only intervene with the bludgeon of supersession, and it has been considered desirable to take powers (clause 272) to bring important works of this kind under Government control, when the Commissioners—after the fullest enquiry—have been adjudged negligent or inefficient in this part of their duties.

Again clause 536 provides a new and alternative method of intervention, by empowering the Local Government where default, mismanagement or abuse of power is proved, to dissolve the municpal board instead of superseding or suspending its constitution.

The electors are thereby given the opportunity of pronouncing judgment on the outgoing Commissioners; if their verdict is unfavourable, a new board will come into power to rectify the errors of its predecessors; if, on the other hand, the electors desire to dissociate themselves from the action of Government, they may by re-election pass a vote of confidence in the board, which has been dissolved.

(c) Municipal finance and taxation.

As already pointed out, the scope or range of municipal action has in recent years been widened and clause 96 enumerates several objects on which the municipal funds may be expended and is rendered elastic by a provision enabling the Commissioners, with the sanction of Government, to add to such objects or purposes from time to time.

It is first proposed to abolish the existing tax on persons. That tax is difficult to assess, and gives rise to widespread complaints of unfair incidence. The rate on holdings is a far more scientific and satisfactory form of taxation, and it is desirable that it should be adopted throughout.

The allocation of separate funds (water or lighting funds, etc.) to the specific purposes for which they are raised, is maintained, but it is not always practicable to make or keep these funds self-supporting or exactly equal to the expenditure they are required to meet.

In practice, the special funds are frequently supplemented from the general fund. The Bill (clause 116) permits the levy of a consolidated rate and also (clause 100) permits the diversion of a surplus accruing in any fund to another special fund.

The cost of capital works and their maintenance is greatly in advance of pre-war charges and, if municipalities are to be improved or even to maintain their existing standards, increased revenue is necessary.

The percentages at which the Commissioners may levy holding, water, lighting and conservancy rates have accordingly been raised, while a new tax on trades, professions and callings—on a scale to be fixed by the Commissioners and approved by Government—and a tax on vessels, moored at municipal ghats, have been proposed.

The tax on dogs is proposed with a view to check rabies rather than to raise revenue.

Power is taken also to impose at any time any other taxation, which the Commissioners may consider reasonable and which the Local Government and where necessary, the Governor-General in Council may approve.

In clause 113, power is taken to impose a water-rate where a supply is based, e.g., on sub-artesian wells with a somewhat restricted distribution system, or a lighting-rate, where, e.g., oil-lamps are provided.

The latrine, conservancy and drainage services are to be maintained by means of the "conservancy-rate" in place of the sliding scale of latrine fees now in force.

The proviso to clause 118 under which the holding-rate on that portion of a valuation, which is in excess of one lakh is to be levied as at present at one-fourth of the ordinary percentage, may cease to operate in advanced municipalities, if the Local Government so direct.

The provisions regarding assessment are in some respects elaborated and, it is hoped, are given a more orderly and logical arrangement.

For convenience of assessment and collection it is provided in clause 120 that the owners of holdings shall be liable in the first instance for the payment of the general rate and the three special rates (water, lighting and conservancy). In the case of the special rates, however, they shall recover three-quarters of the amounts levied from the occupiers (vide clause 154). Even in respect of these rates it is equitable that the owner should pay a share owing to the interest which he must have in the maintenance of the municipal services.

A further important innovation is the proposal (clause 133) to create a panel of municipal assessors. Re-assessment is undoubtedly at present a weak point in some municipalities, and in providing for the creation of a body of independent and impartial assessors, Government are merely adopting a system which has always been in force in the democratic municipalities of Great Britain.

With the object again of securing an equitable and satisfactory assessment, it is proposed (clause 137) to place appeals against the assessment before a committee consisting of the Chairman, a municipal Commissioner appointed by his colleagues and a person nominated by the Local Government.

The latter can always be outvoted, but if he is well-selected, his views should be of value.

Power is taken to tax motor-vehicles.

(d) Conservancy, drainage and water-supply.

The Commissioners are given wide powers to enforce the provision for improvement of house-drains, cess-pools, privies and other such appurtenances and to secure the proper drainage of premises.

They are empowered to insist on the owners of private water-supplies cleansing or silt-clearing a tank or well; they may themselves disinfect such supplies and in accordance with rules framed by Government may provide for the regular analysis of water from any municipal or private supply, and they are required on the requisition of two qualified medical practitioners or of ten rate-payers (subject to certain safeguards against frivolous or vexatious applications) to have the water of any supply tested by the Public Analyst.

Power is taken also to prohibit wet cultivation where it is likely to be injurious to health or to contaminate a water-supply, and the Commissioners may take steps to secure the eradication of the water-hyacinth or any other noxious plant notified in this behalf.

Important provisions (clause 349, et seq.) are also introduced for dealing with insanitary buildings and overcrowding.

(e) Water-supply, lighting and drainage systems.

A statutory obligation is laid on the Commissioners (clause 265) to provide a sufficient water-supply, a sufficient drainage and conservancy system and proper lighting.

Apart from their more general powers of intervention in the case of default, the Local Government, after giving the Commissioners the fullest hearing, are empowered to enforce the provision of these primary needs (clause 268) and for this purpose to direct that any rate or rates authorized under the Act shall be levied or increased but not so as to exceed any maximum prescribed in that behalf. Important provisions are also introduced regulating in some detail the regulations of the Commissioners, vis-à-vis the individual, as regards—

(i) the laying of pipes, etc., through private premises;
(ii) connecting such premises with municipal sewers or mains;
(iii) the metering of premises;
(iv) the free or excess supply of water; and
(v) power to cut off the supply of water.

(f) Streets, buildings and bustees.

The elaborate provisions, which are required to secure the proper development of a town by means of wide and well-planned streets, would be inappropriate for many existing municipalities, and the provisions of the greater portion of Chapter VI will apply only to those towns to which they are expressly extended. This chapter gives the Commissioners wide powers in respect of town-planning and adopts the well-tried Calcutta principle of recoupment by means of the acquisition and re-sale, after development, of surplus lands.

The liberty of the individual to develop his property by means of narrow inadequate lanes is brought under control.

The more drastic provisions of Chapter IX (Buildings) and the building rules, which as Schedule VI form a part of the Bill, apply to those municipalities to which they are expressly extended.

The rules, based on those of Madras mufassal municipalities, are by no means too severe or rigorous for important towns, while for other municipalities rules of a more simple type can be framed under clauses 314 and 315.

The improvement of insanitary bustees has hitherto—partly owing to defects in the present law—received little attention in mufassal towns.

Sections 245, et seq., of the Bengal Municipal Act are hardly less wide in their general import than the corresponding provisions of the Calcutta

Municipal Act, but if these provisions are to become effective, it is necessary to lay down in much greater detail the procedure which is to be adopted.

The Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, has therefore been freely drawn on with the object of making more explicit and precise the steps which should be taken for the improvement of insanitary bustees.

(g) Restraint of infection, child-welfare and school hygiene.

The compulsory notification of certain specified infectious diseases (vide the definition of "dangerous disease") is proposed. The Commissioners are made responsible for the disinfection of infected buildings, conveyances, clothing, bedding and other articles, while persons suffering from certain diseases to be notified in this behalf are forbidden to deal in food-stuffs or wash clothes for the public. It may be assumed that leprosy would in the first instance be so notified.

The Commissioners are given power—subject to an appeal to the Magistrate or Commissioner—to direct that a school shall be closed or any scholars temporarily excluded therefrom, with a view to preventing the spread of disease.

It is proposed to give a similar power in respect of markets.

The Commissioners are expressly given power to provide midwives and to employ health visitors for the promotion of child-welfare, while the importance of the sanitary inspection of schools and of school hygiene generally is definitely recognized.

(h) Markets and slaughter-houses, sale of food and drugs and milk-supply.

The present Act provides inadequately for the regulation of private markets, and it is therefore proposed that the Commissioners should be given wider powers to enforce the improvement of such markets in respect of such matters as paving, drainage, passages and sanitary conveniences.

Provisions are introduced in the Bill for securing the use of standard weights and measures in municipalities to which such provisions have been expressly extended.

The better regulation of food-stuffs is desirable and power is taken for licensing certain trades, such as those of a sweetmeat vendor, baker, dairyman, etc.

The provisions for the inspection and seizure of unwholesome foods and drugs are amplified.

A safeguard is provided by requiring a Magistrate's order for the destruction of such articles.

Many municipalities are anxious to take measures for the improvement of the milk-supply. At the same time, few municipalities are at present in a position to enforce adequate control, and it has therefore been decided that instead of enacting elaborate substantive provisions on this behalf the Commissioners should be given wide powers to frame by-laws for the registration of dairymen and dairies, for the inspection and regulation of dairies and generally for securing and maintaining the purity of the milk-supply (clause 417).

(i) Registration of births and deaths.

The registration of vital statistics, which enables the public health expert to lay his finger on the weak spots of municipal administration, has hitherto not received sufficient attention. It is proposed to make the local registrar of births and deaths to some extent independent of the Commissioners by safeguarding him from punishment by the Commissioners except with the consent of the Local Government and also to empower him to institute proceedings against defaulters. The Commissioners will, however, be responsible for his salary.

(j) Nuisances (clause 432).

It has been considered necessary to state in great detail what is to be deemed a "nuisance". The inspection and abatement of nuisances is the key-stone of a sound and efficient public health department and for the education of public opinion, the guidance of the Commissioners and as a clear direction to the courts, it appears desirable to adopt the custom of English draftsmen by incorporating in the Bill an exhaustive or at least a comprehensive description of "nuisance", and by providing a more detailed form of procedure for the remedy of the same.

(k) Education.

The constitution of an Education Committee is made statutory. It could be appointed as one of the standing committees, but the subject is of sufficient importance to demand prominence in a comprehensive statute of this kind.

Where no education cess is levied under Act IV of 1919, the Local Government is empowered (clause 411) by general or special order to prescribe a percentage of the municipal income (exclusive however of the three chief special rates) to be applied to the promotion of primary education in any municipality.

General Remarks.

Every change of importance which it is proposed to make in the existing law is explained in detail in the subjoined Notes on Clauses, since it is desired in a measure of this magnitude to give the Council the fullest possible assistance in its consideration. A table has also been prepared and annexed to the Bill showing which provisions of the existing Act are omitted from the Bill, and indicating where those provisions of the present Act, which have been retained, are reproduced in the Bill.

It can hardly be denied that the division of the Bill into chapters dealing with distinct subjects will prove more convenient than the arrangement of the present Act, and it is believed that the insertion in each chapter of clauses empowering the Local Government or the Commissioners in meeting to make rules or by-laws will enable the Commissioners readily to realize the exact extent to which the Bill, as occasion demands, can be supplemented and amplified by the sub-legislation of rule and by-law.

It may be urged that having regard to the limited resources of many municipalities, the Bill is overloaded and unduly elaborated.

It deals, however, with no phase of municipal activity which is not already a commonplace of municipal administration in England, and, where any chapter is at present beyond the scope of a particular town, it still, though it may remain for some years a dead letter, possesses educative value and marks a goal, at which the body corporate, at a later stage, may easily aspire.

NOTES ON CLAUSES.

Chapter I.

Clause 2 has been revised in view of the provisions of the Bengal General Clauses Act.

Clause 3.—The definitions have been generally revised on the lines of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, where applicable to mufassil conditions, and new definitions have been inserted where necessary. The definitions applicable to hill districts have been removed to Chapter XXIII so as to make the general portion of the Bill self-contained. Points in regard to the definitions are as follows:—

(1) "The Board of Public Health" for Bengal is substituted in clause 444 for the old Sanitary Board as the advisory body in matters of municipal administration affecting the public health.

(3) "Building." A definition of the term "building" has been inserted, as the absence of a suitable definition has given rise to much difficulty in the part in interpreting the law. The definition is based on section 3 (s) of the City of Bombay Municipal Act, 1888, and section 3(7) of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923.

(4) "Building-line." This definition has been inserted for the purposes of Chapter VI of the Bill. The wording of section 206 of the existing Act is defective and not in any way precise.

(6) The definition of "carriage" has been made clearer, the words "ordinarily drawn by animals" in the existing definition having given rise to complications.

(9) "Conservancy." It is desirable for the purposes of the conservancy rate to bring together under one term the various services in connection with latrines, scavenging and sewage.

(16) & (18) "Framed building." The term applies to buildings in hill municipalities. With the existing definition, most huts might be regarded as "framed buildings" to which the provisions for the improvement of bustees could not be applied. An attempt is made to remove this difficulty by the new definition.

(22) "Holding." The reference to the tax on persons contained in the definition, as set forth in the existing Act, has been omitted, as it is not proposed to continue the tax on persons.

(25) The definition of "hut" has been made more general owing to the varying conditions prevailing in mufassal municipalities.

(26) "Inhabitant". A definition of "inhabitant" has been inserted especially for the purposes of the clauses relating to public health.

(29) "Living thing." A definition of "living thing" has been inserted for conciseness. The English Acts which relate to food and markets contain a succession of references to animals, fish, game, poultry, etc., which add materially to the length of the Statute Book.

(30) "Lodging-house". A definition has been inserted in order to ensure the better regulation of lodging-houses for the poorer classes. Clause 445 may be compared in this connection.

The definition is made more restricted than in the case of the Puri Lodging-houses Act.

(35) "Occupier." The Calcutta definition is adopted.

(38) "Owner." The definition contained in the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, is adopted in preference to the definition contained in section 6(11) of the existing Act. The position and liability of trustees are provided for in the body of the Act (vide clause 514). Provision is made for the inclusion in the term of persons who have rent-free tenants.

(40) "Premises." A wide definition is desirable, specially for the purposes of the clauses relating to public health.

(43) "Private street." As this Bill deals with municipalities, it has been considered advisable to eliminate the word "road" which occurs together with the word "street" in the present Act. The word "road" is now used in the present Bill only in connection with hill municipalities.

(50) "Street alignment." The definition contained in the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, is inserted for the purposes of Chapter VI. The present Act is entirely defective in its provisions relating to projected public streets.

(54) "Water for domestic purposes." The provisions of the existing section 288 are incorporated in the definition and amplified in view of municipal progress.

(55) "Water-works." A comprehensive definition of "water-works' has been introduced on the lines of the United Provinces Act owing to the more detailed provisions of the present Act in relation to water-supply.

Clause 4 is an interpretation clause based partly on the United Provinces Act, and framed with a view to securing all reasonable latitude to the Commissioners in making requisitions in the exercise of their powers under this Act.

Clause 5 has been inserted to prevent unnecessary litigation.

Chapter II.

Clause 6.—A special power has been taken to include railway areas within municipal areas, a safeguard to railway administrations being provided in clause 17 so as to secure their proper representation on the municipality and to enable the Local Government when necessary, of their own motion to alter the number of Commissioners of a municipality.

Clauses 10 and 11 have been inserted to fill a gap in the existing law, the point having been raised as to whether new notifications, rules and by-laws are necessary when changes are made in the municipal area.

Chapter III.

Clauses 14 to 17.—The principles underlying these clauses are explained in the Statement of Objects and Reasons.

Clauses 18 and 19.—These clauses embody in the law certain basic principles as to the preparation of the electoral roll.

Clause 20.—The provisions of this clause relating to disqualification are substantially based on those contained in the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923. The existing Act only provides for removal after election or appointment, which means a fresh election and more expense.

Clause 21.—The principles underlying this clause are dealt with in the Statement of Objects and Reasons.

Clauses 22 to 41 set forth in much greater detail than was formerly the case the procedure in regard to the elections of municipal Commissioners. These matters were formerly left to rules under section 15. The new clauses relating to election offences, and in particular the clauses relating to corrupt practices, are based in the main on the Madras Act. Provision has been made in clause 24 for all elections to be held by ballot, and the definition of corrupt practices in clause 26 has been amplified so as to cover cases of unfair pressure on electors, such as has occurred of late at certain elections. Clauses 33 to 40 deal with the decision of election disputes and follow in the main the provisions at present in force in Bombay.

Clause 40 has been inserted to minimise the present somewhat frequent interference by the courts with the working of municipalities by means of temporary injunctions obtained by disappointed candidates.

Clause 41 confers a wide rule-making power in regard to the details of elections. This power is not however so wide as at present, the most salient provisions in regard to the electoral roll and voting by ballot having been embodied in the text of the Bill.

Clause 42.—The provisions as to the election of the Chairman contained in sections 23 and 59 of the existing Act have been gathered together, the new draft having been taken partly from the Bihar and Orissa Act. This draft has however been amplified so as to avoid a lacuna between the election of a Chairman and the approval of the appointment by the Government. All the provisions contained in this and the subsequent clauses as to the election or appointment of Chairman are modified to meet the new constitution provided in the Bill.

Clause 46 provides for the decision by the Local Government of disputes relating to the elections of Chairman and Vice-Chairman, which disputes at present cause dislocation of work when under reference to the law courts.

Clause 48.—The general powers of the Chairman to act on behalf of the Commissioners have been more specifically defined, so as to cover cases under other Acts where powers, allied to those conferred by this Act, are vested in the local authority, i.e., the Commissioners.

Clause 49.—The principles of delegation of powers by the Chairman to the Vice-Chairman are applied also to the delegation of powers by the Chairman to certain expert officers of the municipality, a general control at the same time being maintained.

Clause 50.—The duties of the Vice-Chairman have been defined on the lines of the United Provinces Act.

Clause 51 while dealing with the leave of the Chairman and Vice-Chairman enables the Local Government to declare the office of either the Chairman or Vice-Chairman vacant in the event of overstayal of leave. The existing Act is silent on this point.

Clause 52 combines provisions contained in existing sections 14, 21, 24, 25 and 26, and brings together the law as to tenure of office.

Clause 53.—It is proposed that the Commissioners shall make an oath or affirmation of allegiance to the King-Emperor. The proposed form of oath or affirmation is partly based on the form of oath or affirmation made by the Members of the local Legislature. Attention is invited to the explanation appended to this clause.

Clause 54 is based on section 27 of the existing Act. An omission is supplied by a detailed provision as to the treatment of vacancies caused by elections being declared void.

Clause 55 has been inserted to avoid a difficulty which has been experienced in regard to the conduct of the first meeting after a general election, and to avoid a lacuna that might otherwise occur if the Commissioners request the Local Government to appoint a Chairman.

Clause 56.—The procedure for the resignation of a Chairman contained in section 27A has been modified. An elected Chairman may resign under the Bill by informing the Commissioners in writing. An appointed Chairman must notify the Local Government, which appoints him, instead of the Commissioner of the Division as formerly.

Clause 57.—The power of removal is taken away from the Commissioner of the Division and given to the Local Government.

The wording of clause (a) has been modified from that of the present clause (a) of section 20 (1) to fall in with accepted modern standards.

Sub-clause (2) (b) is consequential on clause 53.

Sub-clause (2) (d) is inserted to prevent Commissioners acting in their private capacity against the municipality in the law courts.

This clause has been generally amplified, and has been made to cover part of the existing section 57.

Clause 59 has been amplified to make the provisions of clause 58 more safe.

Clauses 62 to 70 confer on the Commissioners powers in regard to the appointment of their establishments considerably larger than those conferred by the present Act. The control of the Divisional Commissioner in regard to this matter is practically eliminated except in regard to the decision of the question as to whether an officer of the municipality has become seriously indebted. At the same time the tenure of office of superior expert officers is made more secure in the same manner as in the Madras Act. The Local Government is given power to insist, where necessary, on the appointment of an expert officer for sanitary or other purposes even in the case of a small municipality. Power has been taken to enable the municipality to arrange for a provident fund combined with a system of bonuses on the principles which are in force in certain railway administrations, this being a strong inducement to employees to continue in service for a long period.

In the case of Health Officers and Sanitary Inspectors, the Local Government has been empowered to fix certain essential qualifications.

Clause 76, sub-clause (3), has been made a little more stringent in order to insure greater punctuality.

Clause 77.—While providing for the inspection of the minutes of proceedings by the tax-payers, it has been provided that a small fee for inspection may be levied by the Commissioners in order to avoid frivolous applications.

Clause 80.—The United Provinces Act has been followed in regard to the provisions for the settlement of disputes without reference to the law courts.

Clauses 81 and 82.—Provision has been made in these clauses for the appointment of special committees, the members of which need not be all Commissioners. This is particularly desirable in regard to such matters as child-welfare, school hygiene, etc.

Clause 83.—The rule-making power has been somewhat amplified to secure some latitude in regard to changes of procedure which may be found to be necessary in the light of experience.

Clause 85.—Provision has been made for the preparation and publication of the annual municipal report.

Chapter IV.

Clauses 86 to 92 bring together the various provisions of the law in regard to municipal property. The main changes in the existing law are in the direction of making it clear that the municipality may take up land for purposes of recoupment, a necessary provision, in order to enable them to carry out any comprehensive improvement scheme.

With reference to the ownership of streets, safeguards have been provided in cases of industrial concerns which maintain water-works, etc., which pass under municipal streets.

Clause 93.—The provisions of clauses 93 to 100 bring together the law in regard to the municipal fund in the same manner as that in which the funds of the Corporation are dealt with in the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923.

Clause 94.—As in the case of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, power has been taken to enable municipalities to maintain current and deposit accounts with approved banks.

Clause 95 provides for the usual first charges on the municipal fund.

Clause 96 sets out in detail the various objects on which a municipality may reasonably be called upon to spend its money. Greater latitude has been given to the municipality than is at present the case under the existing law. New provisions include the following :—

Item (viii) (the construction and maintenance of model dwelling-houses), item (xiv) (the prevention of the spread of epidemic diseases), item (xv) (the payment of the expenses of indigent inhabitants who have to be sent away for treatment for rabies, etc.), item (xvi) (the maintenance and improvement of municipal dairy-farms and provision of milk-supply), item (xxvii) (the proper maintenance and preparation of maps and plans), item (xxviii) (the provision of relief in time of famine or scarcity or internal commotion), item (xxix) (the power to contribute to charitable societies aiding in the disposal of unclaimed dead bodies and the dead bodies of paupers) and item (xxxi) (the power to compensate an employee for loss incurred in execution of his duty).

Clause 97 materially enlarges the powers of the Commissioners in regard to areas outside the municipality for the purpose of lighting and water-supply schemes and other essential services, in connection with which it is necessary to carry on work in the non-municipal area. A provision is also made for municipal scholarships to deserving residents of the municipality.

Clause 98 enables the Commissioners to take over any institution the affairs of which may most suitably be conducted by them.

Clause 99.—Except in the case of a salaried Chairman or Vice-Chairman, the Commissioners ordinarily shall not receive salaries. If they do so, they will be dealt with under the first item in the table in clause 485.

Clause 100 sets out the restrictions which should be imposed on the expenditure of monies collected for the purposes of the essential services of the municipality. It enables the municipalities, subject to any objection by the rate-payers, to amalgamate, with the sanction of the Local Government, the funds required for the three chief services, viz., lighting, water-supply and conservancy, and it safeguards the interests of the rate-payers against any expenditure of such monies on objects other than these three essential services.

Clauses 101 to 106 materially enlarge the powers of the Commissioners in regard to the budget estimates. The limit of expenditure on a particular scheme, which the Commissioners may incur without the previous sanction of the Local Government, has also been raised from Rs. 5,000 to Rs. 10,000. The power of modification of the budget renders it unnecessary to have a separate procedure as to transfer from one hand to another.

Clause 109 provides for proper audit of the municipal fund, the appointment of auditors and the payment of the cost of audit. It is proposed that municipalities shall pay the whole or part of this, as they would have to pay a chartered accountant if they were a private concern.

Clause 110.—As it is proposed that municipalities should have a much greater freedom than formerly in regard to their expenditure and their balances, it is necessary to reserve to the Local Government the power to prescribe the maintenance of an adequate closing balance.

Chapter V.

Clause 111.—The provisions in regard to municipal taxation are set forth in Chapter V. It is proposed, as stated in the Statement of Objects and Reasons, to abolish the tax on persons and to have a more uniform system of taxation than at present obtains in municipalities. The dog tax referred to in clause (g) of sub-clause (1), the tax on trades, professions and callings and the imposition of fees for the grant of licenses are new.

Clause 112.—The maximum rate on holdings has been raised as explained in the Statement of Objects and Reasons.

Clause 113.—In addition to the provisions contained in the existing Act, a provision has been made for the levy of a water-rate where water is supplied by municipal water-carts or similar agency and a lighting-rate where oil and acetyline lamps are employed. The maximum of the water-rate has been raised.

Clause 114.—The old latrine-rate has been converted into a general conservancy-rate, it being considered desirable that all matters relating to conservancy and sewage shall form part of a connected system.

The provisions of sections 325 and 326 of the existing Act have been made more detailed, so as to set forth the liabilities and exemptions of mill owners, etc., who provide their own septic tanks or similar works.

Clauses 116 and 117.—Provision is made in these clauses for the levy of a consolidated rate where the Commissioners consider this to be desirable.

Clause 118.—Provision is made in this and the succeeding clauses for the entertainment of a more skilled agency than is at present employed in many instances for the assessment of the rate on holdings. It is proposed to maintain a panel of qualified municipal assessors from which municipalities may select competent officers whenever the time comes for re-assessment.

The clause follows closely the provisions of the existing section 101, but the Local Government is empowered to declare in certain cases that the proviso to sub-section (2), which limits the rating of buildings which have cost more than a lakh of rupees, shall not apply.

Clause 119 confers power on the Commissioners to settle doubtful points in regard to assessments without reference to the law courts.

Clause 120.—An important modification is proposed in regard to the system of rating. Under the existing system the latrine tax falls mainly on the occupier. It is now proposed to have a uniform system of rating under which the liability for the lighting, water and conservancy-rates shall fall upon the owner in the first instance, he being entitled to make equitable recoveries from the occupier under the provisions of clause 154. The owner is however made liable for one-fourth of the rate in all cases, because the maintenance of the municipal services serves his permanent interest in the holding.

Clause 123.—The existing section 102 is modified so as to prevent the Commissioners from further jeopardising the municipal finances by lowering the rates at a time when the municipal funds are in an unsatisfactory condition.

Clause 124 follows existing section 103, but provision is made for including the names of occupiers in the assessment list.

Clause 125 is based on existing section 97, but provides for the continuance of the former assessment until the commencement of a new year after the new assessment lists have been prepared.

Clause 126.—The provisions for amendment of the assessment list have been grouped together. A new provision is made in this clause for the giving of notice to any rate-payer of any alteration which the Commissioners propose to make in the assessment list, whereby he may be affected.

Clause 127 provides that the assessment list shall be conclusive, subject to the rights, conferred by a later clause, of appeal to a special committee.

Clause 129.—A new provision has been made to ensure that remissions made by the Commissioners shall be scrutinized from time to time. This provision exists in the rules of the audit department.

Clause 130.—More detailed provisions have been inserted in regard to the remission of rates on account of vacancy. Generally speaking, the principles of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, have been followed in this matter. A more generous provision as to remission or refund is inserted in this clause, the former remission of one-half being increased to three-quarters. In clause (i) of sub-clause (4) provision is made that a person who keeps a pleasure-house or a second residence within a municipality is not entitled to a remission or refund on account of vacancy.

Clause 132.—A provision is made for proper notice being given of transfers of property within a municipality. The principle of this clause is taken from the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923.

Clause 133 provides for the appointment of the panel of assessors.

Clause 134 enables the Local Government to see that the municipalities perform their duties in regard to the appointment of qualified men to prepare the assessment lists.

Clause 135 gives a further safeguard to the individual rate-payer by insisting that notice shall be given to him whenever his rates are raised or a new rate is imposed, so as to enable him to put forward his objections, if any, to the appeal committee.

Clause 136 while following existing section 113 lays down the time-limit for applications for review of an assessment.

Clause 137 provides for the appointment of a special committee, including a person appointed by the Government (who need not be a Commissioner) to decide appeals against the assessment list, instead of these appeals being heard by an appeal committee composed of, and appointed entirely by, the Commissioners.

Clause 139 makes the law more specific as to the powers of the Commissioners in regard to the realisation of rates pending an appeal.

Clause 141.—The drafting of existing section 118 has been slightly revised.

Clause 144.—The time-limit imposed by the existing Act for the issue of a distress warrant against a defaulter is extended to six months, as the existing limit of three months has been found to be inadequate. Otherwise the recovery provisions in clauses 144 to 153 follow substantially the existing law.

Clause 154 (vide note on clause 120).

Clause 156.—The list of carriages and animals which are exempted from the carriage tax has been brought up to date, and under clause 157 the Commissioners are given a general power of exempting special classes of carriages or animals from the tax.

Clauses 170 and 171 provide for the imposition of a dog tax.

Clauses 172 to 180 deal with the imposition of tax on carts. The provisions in regard to this tax have been changed considerably, the amount payable for registration being raised and special rates being imposed on carts propelled by mechanical power, e.g., motor-lorries. In clause 174 a special provision is made for the higher rate where the carts are of such a description that owing to their narrow tyres and rims they cause undue damage to the surface of the municipal streets.

Clauses 181 to 187 repeat with minor modifications the provisions of existing sections 149 to 155 in regard to ferries. The present section 148 is no longer necessary in view of the amendments already made in section 35 of the Bengal Ferries Act.

Clauses 188 to 194 deal with tolls on bridges. It is proposed to discontinue the existing power to levy tolls on roads, owing to the unsatisfactory nature of such tolls in themselves and the difficulty of arranging any satisfactory system of collection.

Clauses 195 to 202 reproduce with minor drafting amendments the general provisions of existing sections 161 to 172 in regard to tolls on ferries and bridges.

Chapter VI.

The provisions contained in clauses 205 to 208 are new. They are on the lines of the proposals made in the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, and it is especially provided in clause 204 that they shall only be enforced in those municipalities where the state of development is such that, in the opinion of the Local Government, they can profitably be introduced.

It will be noted that the provisions divide themselves into two parts, one for the prescription of the actual width of the street and the other for the proper frontage of buildings facing upon it, and provision for either of these objects can be made separately by the Commissioners according to requirements.

Care has been taken to safeguard existing property, so far as this is compatible with the public requirements. This is secured by the general restrictions relating to building lines contained in the proviso to sub-clause (1) and in sub-clause (4) of clause 205.

Provision in regard to additions to buildings or boundary walls is made in clause 206 so that, where it is proposed to open out a proper street alignment within a municipality, a property owner shall not obstruct the carrying out of that project by indiscriminate building.

Power is also taken that, where the prospect of completing the street alignment is not immediate, permission may be given to owners to build within the street alignment subject to the condition of removal, when the project is brought to fruition.

Provision is made in clause 207 for taking up vacant lands with a view to street improvements, and in clause 208 for setting forward a building.

Clause 209.—This clause, as a general clause, gives powers to the Commissioners in regard to public streets, squares and gardens It is self-explanatory.

The provision of open spaces in a municipality is important from the point of view of public health and education, and special provision has therefore been made for this. Attention is invited to sub-clause (e) of this clause, whereby the Commissioners are able to put into effect their powers in regard to recoupment by selling off the improved building sites acquired in connection with any scheme of street improvement.

Clause 210 provides for the relinquishment or lease of public streets, squares and gardens which are no longer required by the municipality.

Clause 211 deals with projected public streets, and prescribes the minimum width for the same. The clause is based on the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923.

Clauses 213 to 218 deal with private streets, the regulation of which is quite insufficiently provided for at present. These clauses (except clause 214, which follows the Madras Act) are also based on the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, and they are designed—

(i) to ensure that property owners shall not develop their property in such a manner as to create an overcrowded and insanitary area; and

(ii) to ensure that private streets, which may later be taken over as public streets, shall conform to the general design of the town instead of being narrow and insanitary lanes, impassable in rainy weather and a resort for bad characters on dark nights. The suitable regulation of private streets is essential, as these streets will pay a great part in the later development of the town.

Special attention is invited to the provisions of clause 217, under which the Commissioners can call on the owners of the land fronting or adjoining or abutting on a private street to put it in decent repair, and to clause 218, under which the persons interested are empowered to take necessary measures for putting their private streets in order and then handing them over to the municipality, thus divesting themselves of the cost of maintenance.

Clauses 219 to 232 follow more closely the scheme of the existing Act, being the routine provisions for the protection of existing streets, the proper fencing of excavations and the closing of streets for repairs, and the time-honoured provisions in regard to verandahs, platforms and such like projections. Clause 227, which is based on the United Provinces Act, is designed to prevent people cascading water from their roofs and elsewhere on to the heads of the passers-by.

Clause 224.—A definite provision is inserted on the same lines as in the United Provinces Act for the licensing of platforms upon or over any public street, this form of encroachment being particularly liable to occur, and otherwise difficult to keep within bounds. The fee for the license will not be large, but it is hoped that the provision will ensure proper registration of existing platforms and prevent subsequent increase in their area.

Clause 229 also deals with the removal of projections, encroachments and erections, the safeguards contained in the existing Act being maintained in regard to erections of old standing.

Clause 232.—Provision is made to empower the Commissioners to stop the indiscriminate use of public streets by hawkers and other like persons.

Chapter VII.

Clause 233.—The existing law has been amplified so as to include outfall —and disposal—works.

Clauses 235 and 237.—The provisions of existing section 187 have been split up, so as to make it clear that where a rate-payer pays the conservancy-rate, it is for the municipality to remove the sewage, rubbish and offensive matter to the places appointed for its disposal.

Clause 239.—Special provisions have been made for the conservancy of factories and business premises on the lines of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923.

Clause 241.—The wording of existing section 270 is unsatisfactory. The municipal sewers are the places into which sewage is to be put and yet the existing section prohibits this. The wording has therefore been recast.

Clause 242.—Special provision has been made for the disposal of carcasses. The time for giving notice, which is specified in the United Provinces Act, from which this clause has been taken, has been shortened in the interests of public health.

Clause 244 reproduces existing section 193. It is not proposed to re-enact existing section 194. This work should be done through direct municipal agency.

Clauses 245 and 246.—More detailed provisions than are at present in force have been inserted in regard to the provision of suitable privy accommodation in dwelling-houses and places where workmen are employed. The provisions of these clauses are based on those contained in the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, and allow for the improved systems introduced by modern sanitary engineering.

Clause 247 (read with the penalty clause) renders penal the obstruction, the illicit construction and the destruction of drains, cesspools, etc.

Clause 249 clearly defines the powers of the Commissioners to inspect latrines, urinals, cesspools, etc., and makes it clear that they may interfere with the surface of the soil of the premises in which such latrines, urinals, etc., are situated, and cause it to be opened for the purpose of such inspection.

Clause 250.—The drafting of the United Provinces Act in regard to requisitions relating to cesspools, etc., has been adopted as being preferable to that of the present law in Bengal.

Clause 251 enables the Commissioners to open up a way to any privy for the purpose of cleansing it, by requiring the owner to provide a suitable house-gully.

Clause 254.—Provision has been made to enable the Commissioners to make special scavenging arrangements for fairs, festivals and other large assemblies of people, whether within or in the neighbourhood of the municipality.

Clause 255 enables the Commissioners to deal with premises, where there are undue accumulations of filth, etc., by means of a special staff, to be paid for in whole or in part by the owner or occupier of the premises.

Clause 256.—The powers of the Commissioners to make by-laws in regard to conservancy have been amplified and more clearly defined.

Clause 257 defines the powers of the Commissioners in regard to the construction of drains, and clause 258 defines their powers in regard to the alteration and improvement of drains. The existing section 197 and generally the provisions of the existing Act are quite inadequate in this connection.

Clause 259 defines the rights of the owner or occupier of a building or land to connect his private drains with the municipal drains.

Clause 261.—The powers which already exist under section 228 of the present Act, as conferred by sub-clause (1) of this clause on the Commissioners for the carrying out of a joint drainage scheme in regard to two or more premises, are qualified by the addition of sub-clause (2) which compels the Commissioners to give due notice of the alterations which are about to be made to the owners of the premises affected thereby.

Clause 262.—The provisions of this clause amplify the provisions of the existing section 227 of the Bengal Municipal Act.

Clause 263 introduces the power of the Commissioners to compel owners to construct cesspools and house-drains in cases where it is not possible to connect the house-drainage system with the municipal drains.

Clause 264 provides for by-laws relating to drainage.

Chapter VIII.

This chapter brings together and amplifies the provisions of the existing Act in regard to systems of drainage, sewerage, lighting and water-supply, and in particular the provisions regulating the construction and maintenance of systems which are joint between municipalities and other local authorities. The present provisions as to joint schemes are contained in sections 37A to 37M of the Act in so far as such schemes relate to water-supply or drainage. The new Chapter VIII extends the same procedure to joint lighting systems.

Clause 266.—The reference to electricity under this clause is somewhat more direct than that contained in the present section 319. Sub-clause (2) retains the power to Government to sanction advances in suitable cases to meet the cost of preparing and carrying out lighting or water-supply schemes.

Clause 267 restricts the power given by existing section 37J to the Local Government to order the execution of a joint scheme by an officer appointed by them.

Clauses 268 and 269 are based on section 37K of the existing Act and are applied also to lighting schemes. The procedure, however, is very much shortened, the Local Government under the present Bill being able to prepare a scheme of drainage, sewerage, water-supply, lighting, etc., without a long preliminary negotiation with the Commissioners. The subsequent stages are also shortened and powers of obstruction are removed, a safeguard, however, being provided in sub-clause (3) of clause 268, which requires the Local Government to satisfy themselves that the financial resources of the municipality will not be subjected to any undue strain by any scheme that may be enforced on it by the Government under this clause. Sub-clause (4) enables the Government to compel the defaulting Commissioners to raise the rates up to the maximum for the carrying out of any such essential scheme, and enables the Government to advance money from the public funds for the execution of such scheme. The appointment of a person to carry out a scheme, in connection with which the Commissioners have made default, is not a new power, but is contained in section 64 of the existing Act.

Clause 269 applies the provisions of clause 268 to joint schemes.

Clause 270 enables the municipalities to join in a scheme initiated under clause 268 or 269.

Clause 271 provides for the settlement of disputes.

Clause 272 enables the Local Government to take over any of the three essential services of a municipality in case of inefficient management. The necessity for this clause is set out in the Statement of Objects and Reasons. It deals with the taking over the management of a particular system and is more in the nature of a provision for an engineering control than for the control of a department.

Clause 273 introduces modern provisions in regard to the laying down of pipes, drains, wires or sewers through private land as in the Punjab Act.

Clauses 274 and 275 provide for due consideration being shown to the public in the laying of cables, wires, etc.

Clause 276 amplifies the provisions of the present section 290, which provisions at present relate only to water-supply. This principle of the existing section 290 is applied to water-supply, lighting and drainage.

Sub-clause (2) applies the principle of section 302 of the Act to water-supply, drainage and lighting connections.

Clause 277 is based on the Punjab Act and on the provisions contained in clause 228 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, the object being to secure that private connections within a reasonable distance of the municipal mains shall be connected therewith.

Clause 278 and the following clauses introduce modern provisions in regard to the measurement of gas, electricity and water by means of meters. The existing Act only provides specifically for meters in the case of water.

The use of meters for lighting is at present governed by the regulations, but it is desirable to provide for it in the body of the Statute.

Clause 280 gives the usual power of inspection for the reading of meters, and clause 281 introduces the same presumption as in the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, as to the correctness of the reading.

In clause 282, however, it is provided that, if an incorrect meter has been found to be supplied and if the fact that it is incorrect is not due to its having been tampered with, the Commissioners shall provide a new meter at their own expense.

Clause 283 provides for the temporary replacement of a damaged meter which is under repair.

Clause 284 provides for the testing of meters, enabling owners and occupiers to challenge meter readings but at their own cost, unless the meter is found to be incorrect by more than two per cent.

Clause 285 provides against tampering with meters and sub-clause (2) introduces a necessary provision for evidence in proof of fraud.

Clause 286 provides against the injuring of meters and fittings.

Clause 287 corresponds with section 289 of the present Act.

Clause 288 corresponds with the existing section 294, but is more specifically drafted. It deals with the supply of water for purposes other than domestic purposes.

Clause 289 introduces more detailed provisions than are contained in the present section 295 for the calculation of the free allowance of water which is to be supplied for domestic purposes, and for the calculation of excess consumption and for the apportionment of the cost of such excess consumption between owners and occupiers of houses, with special provisions to cover cases where there is a transfer during a quarter.

Clause 290 corresponds with the present section 301 of the existing Act, but a sub-clause (4) has been added to enable the Corporation to see that the connection or fitting which has been approved by them shall be maintained in proper order after such approval.

Clause 291 gives the Commissioners the necessary power to supply water to persons outside the municipality or to other local bodies on terms approved by the Local Government and subject to sanction by the same. This clause amplifies the present section 300, and it imposes some control by the Local Government in this matter in the interests of the inhabitants of the municipality, to prevent undue preference being given to outsiders to the detriment of the persons living within the municipality.

Clause 292 collects various sections of the existing law relating to offences in regard to water-supply.

Clause 293 is on the same principle as section 305 of the existing Act, so far as the duty of the owner to keep the water connections of the house in repair is concerned, but it also provides for the occupier deducting any expenses incurred on repairs which should have been carried out by the owner, from the rent payable to him.

Clause 294 reproduces the existing section 304.

Clause 295 enables the Commissioners to take over and maintain communication-pipes and fittings of private water-works connected with the municipal water-supply. The provision is taken from Bombay and a similar power is contained in the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923.

Clause 296 amplifies the provisions of the present section 297 as to the circumstances in which water may be cut off. Under the present Act water may be cut off if there is refusal to pay the water-rate. Following the decision of the Council with reference to the corresponding clause in the Calcutta Municipal Act, this power is abandoned, but there are other cases (which are stated in the present clause) under which it is necessary that water shall be cut off in the interests of the public.

The drafting is based on the provisions of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, and special exceptions are made in regard to water required for privies and urinals.

Clause 297 gives a general rule-making power in regard to water, gas and electricity to the Local Government in order to secure that some definite standard shall be maintained in these matters in the various municipalities. The matters dealt with in this clause are largely technical and liable to change as progress is made in the science of engineering, and it is desirable that it should be possible to adapt these regulations to changing circumstances without having recourse to fresh legislation.

Attention is invited to sub-clause (k) whereby the Local Government are empowered to exercise a proper control over the charges that may be exacted by the Commissioners for the supply of water, gas and electricity. This is a very necessary safeguard to the rate-payers.

Chapter IX.

This chapter supersedes the existing sections 236, et seq. The wording generally follows that of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, as being more up to date and comprehensive than that of the existing Act.

As in the case of the chapter relating to streets, only certain portions of this chapter will apply to the less advanced municipalities. Buildings in such municipalities will be regulated by model rules and by-laws. In the more advanced municipalities, however, it is necessary to conform to the requirements of modern times.

Clause 298 limits the application of this chapter to the more advanced municipalities, except in the case of certain elastic clauses.

Clause 299 applies to all municipalities and provides for the prohibition of building on insanitary and unsuitable sites, this being of first importance to the health of the town and of the inmates of the building constructed.

Clause 300 enables the Commissioners, in the event of the extent or position of the site of a building being disputed, to decide the matter.

Clause 301 provides for the means of access to a new building and the prevention of the erection of a building in such a manner as to deprive others of access to a public road. This point is dealt with partly in section 241 (c) of the existing Act.

Clause 302 provides for the exemption of certain small buildings from the general building regulations and also for the speedy erection of temporary buildings, such as infectious hospitals, etc.

Sub-clause (c) of that clause provides against the infringement of private rights, which can only be protected by action taken on behalf of the owner of a dominant tenement.

Clauses 303 to 305 deal with applications for sanction. These clauses must be read with the details contained in Schedule VI. Provision is made against an arbitrary refusal by the Commissioners to accord sanction and also against their delaying to pass orders. If they do not pass orders within a reasonable time as provided by clause 304, then under clause 305 the person who desires to erect the building may proceed with the work provided that he does not contravene this Act or any rules, etc., made thereunder.

Clause 306 introduces a provision for a completion certificate after a new building other than a hut has been erected to enable the Commissioners to inspect under clause 307 the work that has been done. The provision at present exists in the case of Darjeeling.

Under clause 307 the municipal authorities are empowered to inspect works in progress and after completion and to insist on their being carried out in conformity with the Act. This provision also was only applicable to Darjeeling under the existing law.

Clause 308 gives the grounds under which the erection of a new building may be refused and confines the Commissioners to certain clear and well defined reasons.

Clause 309 is taken from the United Provinces Act, and is designed to minimise the risk of fire in urban areas. In the case of inflammable roofs and walls, which have been erected before the Commissioners have prohibited the erection of such structures, compensation is to be paid to the owner if the structure is removed by order.

Clause 310 provides against fraud and misrepresentation in the making of applications under clause 303.

Clause 311 is based on section 239 of the existing Act, and it is made more specific as to the limit of time within which building operations are to commence after sanction has been given. This point is not provided for satisfactorily in the present law.

Clause 312 is based largely on the provisions of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, and provides for the control by the Commissioners of material alterations and additions to buildings. It explains definitely the kind of repairs, etc., that are to be considered to be material alterations and additions. A provision to regulate such repairs is on the face of it as necessary as a provision to regulate the erection of new buildings. More breaches of the building regulations occur in regard to such alterations and additions than when a building is being built owing to the difficulty of check.

Clause 313 enables the Local Government to alter the building regulations contained in Schedule VI where necessary. A similar provision in regard to other schedules is contained in clause 541.

Clause 314 provides for the adaptation of the provisions of this Act and of Schedule VI to less advanced municipalities by means of by-laws framed by the Commissioners either of their own motion or under orders of the Local Government.

Clause 315 deals in far greater detail than the present section 241 with the various matters which should be provided for by means of by-laws. These matters are technical and it is not necessary to refer to them in detail. The need of proper ventilation and sanitation is made more clear than in the existing Act.

Clauses 316 and 317 group together the provisions for the demolition or alteration of any unlawful work under the orders of a Magistrate on an application by the Commissioners after the owner has had an opportunity of complying with a requisition made by the Commissioners. A similar provision exists in section 244 of the present Act in regard to Darjeeling.

Clause 318 gives the owner a special opportunity of showing cause before a prosecution is instituted against him for failure to comply with a requisition made by the Commissioners in regard to matters referred to in clause 316 or clause 317.

Clause 319 provides for the discontinuance and if necessary the stopping of unlawful building. A somewhat similar provision is in force in Darjeeling. This is now made of general application.

Chapter X.

Bustees.

This chapter deals with bustees on a principle different altogether from the principles of the existing Act. Under the existing Act provision is made in sections 243 and 244 for the control of the erection of new lines of huts, and in sections 245 et seq. there is a general power to affect sanitary improvements in bustees. The provisions of this chapter are however based on those contained in the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, the problems in this respect being similar both in Calcutta and in the mufassal and the Calcutta provisions being more detailed.

In Clause 320 power is taken to define the limits of a bustee, and it is provided that the provisions of this chapter shall not apply either to small groups of huts in an area of less than two bighas or to certain masonry buildings included in a bustee.

Clause 321 provides for a proper inquiry, whenever it is reported that a bustee is in an insanitary state, by a registered medical practitioner or a person holding the diploma of public health and an engineer. A proper lay-out is to be prepared by these persons. These persons will be an authority independent of the Commissioners, and they will devise a scheme for altering the bustee so as to make its condition sanitary. The Commissioners under clause 322 may take action on their report.

Clause 323 deals with expenses in regard to bustee improvement. These expenses will ordinarily fall on the owner of the bustee and the owners of huts, but in special cases the Commissioners may meet the whole or a portion of the charges which should be borne by the owners of huts and may advance from the municipal fund money to defray the charges which should have been borne by the owner of the bustee land itself. In the latter case they will have a lien on such land for the repayment of what they have lent.

Clause 325 deals in detail with the treatment of masonry buildings in a bustee. Generally speaking, such masonry buildings are not to be interfered with except by acquisition and on payment of full compensation.

Clause 326 deals with streets and passages in bustees. These streets and passages require special treatment owing to the way on which huts are taken up and replaced in other positions.

Clauses 327 and 328 provide for the common bathing arrangements and common privy accommodation in a bustee, and also for lighting, water-supply and other conveniences in a bustee.

Clause 329 gives power to the owner to remove huts and cause the bustee to cease to be treated as such. Necessary safeguards are however included as in the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, to see that huts are not temporarily removed merely in order to gain time and then put them up again. Provision is also made in sub-clause (8) for compensation in cases of hardship, owing to bustee land, on which there are roads, ceasing to be included within the bustee.

Clause 330 provides for street alignments of huts in those bustees for which it is considered inexpedient to provide a regular standard plan and for the leaving of suitable open spaces. This is the milder form of procedure for the improvement of a bustee and under clause 331 adequate time is allowed for the hut-owners to set back their huts to the prescribed alignment at the time of repair or rebuilding of the same. Seven years is considered a suitable time for this purpose. Compensation may also be paid in cases where, after the expiry of five years, the Commissioners decide to compel the hut-owner who has not set back his hut to do so. It is not desirable that such compensation should be greater than the value of the hut less the value of the materials.

In clause 332 provision is made for the alignment of masonry buildings erected in a bustee, in respect of which a standard plan has been prepared or a street alignment prescribed.

Chapter XI.

Clause 333.—The drafting of section 199 of the existing Act has been adopted with slight formal alterations.

Clause 334 defines more specifically the powers of the Commissioners to make owners and persons having control over sources of water-supply which are used for drinking or culinary purposes liable to protect the same from pollution.

Clause 335 is largely a corollary of clause 334 and, in addition to the powers contained in the present section 199A of the Bengal Municipal Act, provides for the filling up of insanitary wells, etc.

Clause 336 provides a necessary power of inspection, and clauses 337, 338 and 339 introduce detailed provisions on the lines of the English Public Health Act for the proper analysis of drinking water and water used for culinary purposes, whether supplied by the municipality or taken from the sources under the control of private parties. Extensive powers of analysis of food exist already under the Bengal Food Adulteration Act, but that Act does not cover the analysis of water-supply. Provision is made against harassment of parties by frivolous requests for analysis.

Chapter XII.

Clause 341 is a new clause based on the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, to provide for the proper control of places where water accumulates to the detriment of the public health. This is a particularly important clause for the eradication of malaria and the promotion of public health. The provisions are not, however, made as stringent as is the case in Calcutta.

Clause 342 gives the Commissioners more detailed powers than they have at present in regard to the control over excavations.

Clause 343 provides for a further safeguard to members of the public in regard to excavations, being framed in order to prevent them from falling into the same. The provision exists in the present Act, but the limit of time within which the excavation is to be protected has been removed in the interests of safety.

Clause 344 is new and provides for the control of noxious plants and water-hyacinth.

Clause 345 gives a specific power to the Commissioners to inspect buildings on sanitary grounds, and clause 346 provides for the cleansing and white-washing of buildings on such grounds.

Clause 347 reproduces section 195 of the existing Act, but is worded somewhat more widely than that section. In particular, the danger of jungle in municipalities as a bar to ventilation is more clearly recognised than in the existing law, as are also the evils arising from thick vegetation even though such vegetation is not in itself noxious.

Clause 348 amplifies the provisions contained in the present section 210, the wording of which has been found to be defective, the drafting of the clause, therefore, being made more general.

Clause 349 introduces the provisions of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, in regard to obstructive buildings objectionable on sanitary grounds. This clause is of special importance in regard to any project for the comprehensive improvement of a municipal area.

Clauses 350 and 351 make more specific the powers of the Commissioners to cause the vacating of dwelling-houses which are unfit for human habitation. The provisions of these clauses are taken from the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, and provide for a more detailed procedure for putting buildings of this type into proper condition than exists in the present law.

Clause 352 provides against overcrowding, and is a necessary addition to the existing law, especially in industrial areas. It follows the law which obtains in Madras.

Clause 353 gives an emergency power to the Commissioners to take action themselves in regard to property which is in such a condition that it causes imminent danger to the public. This clause follows the United Provinces Act.

Chapter XIII.

Clause 354.—The list of offensive and dangerous trades, occupations and processes has been made more specific in the light of experience. The wording of sub-clause (x) has been made more general in view of the recent decision of the High Court that "kilns" do not include "clamps". Necessary provisions in regard to petroleum have been inserted in sub-clause (4).

Clause 355.—The drafting of section 310 has been slightly altered, the word "nuisance" having a special technical significance in this Bill under the provisions of Chapter XXI.

Clause 356.—The drafting of this clause has been made somewhat wider than the present section 263, so that control over the keeping of horses, ponies, cattle, etc., in any part of a municipality may be exercised by the Commissioners.

Sub-clause (2) gives detailed powers to the Commissioners to prescribe that horses, ponies, cattle, etc., shall be kept in sanitary and well constructed stables or stalls.

Clause 357 is based on the present section 264, but it also enables the Commissioners to license places as public stables on such conditions as they may think to be proper.

Clause 358 should be read with sub-clause (b) of clause 359 in so far as it relates to the stalling of horses, camels, cattle, etc., and with sub-clause (c) of that clause in so far as it relates to the prevention of any public nuisance from the stalling and straying of pigs. Representations have been made from municipal authorities that increased powers in this last direction must be taken owing to the annoyance caused.

Chapter XIV.

Chapter XIV "Restraint of infection" is almost entirely new. The existing Act provides no scientific machinery for checking the spread of infectious or contagious diseases. The provisions of this chapter are taken from the Public Health Acts of various countries and from the Public Health sections adopted by provinces whose municipal legislation is more advanced than is the case in Bengal.

Clause 360 imposes a definite duty on the Commissioners to take action in the event of the outbreak of any dangerous disease and defines the duties which they are to carry out in this connection.

Clause 361 provides for the preliminary step of notifying the occurrence of any infectious case in a private house.

Clause 362 provides for the removal of patients to an isolation hospital, due provision being made for securing the privacy of women according to custom and for the presence of an attendant with female patients. It also provides for the maintenance of an adequate nursing staff to deal with infectious cases.

Clause 363 provides for the disinfection of premises where infectious cases have occurred, or which are kept in such a condition that they are likely to foster dangerous diseases. Provision is made that, where the occupier of the premises which are cleansed is indigent, the municipality may bear the cost of such disinfection. Provision is also made for the vacation by the inmates of premises which are being disinfected, temporary accommodation being provided by the authorities during the period of such vacation.

Clause 364 gives a necessary power to the Commissioners to destroy a hut or shed to prevent the spread of infection, suitable compensation being given to the owner thereof.

Clause 365 provides against the letting out of infected houses until the work of disinfection has been properly carried out.

Clause 366 provides for the supply of places and materials for disinfection, and for the disinfection of clothing or conveyances or any article which has been infected, and for the destruction of, and grant of compensation for, any article which is likely to retain infection or cannot be preserved.

Clause 367 is a corollary providing for the washing of conveyances, clothing, etc., exposed to infection.

Clause 368 renders penal the doing of certain acts by infected persons which are likely to cause risk of infection to others.

Clause 369 applies the same principle to the disposal of infected articles by private persons at the risk of their neighbours.

Clause 370 imposes certain elementary safeguards in regard to the segregation of the infected, and enables persons driving, or in charge of, a public conveyance which is used for the carrying of an infected person to a hospital, or for the carrying of a dead body for disposal or of infected clothing, etc., for disinfection or destruction, to charge an adequate fare for the expense and trouble to which he will subsequently be put in getting his conveyance disinfected.

Clause 371 provides for the disinfection of public conveyances after these are exposed to contamination.

Clause 372 provides for the maintenance by the Commissioners of ambulances for the removal of infectious cases.

Clause 373 provides for the inspection of infected premises.

Clause 374 provides for the closing of a market with a view to prevent the spread of any dangerous disease, subject to an appeal by the occupier or farmer or any person interested to the Magistrate or the Commissioner of the Division.

Clause 375 makes a like provision in regard to the closing of a school owing to the appearance of a dangerous disease amongst the scholars or owing to the state of the school. This clause is based on the Scotch law.

Clause 376 gives detailed powers in regard to by-laws relating to the prevention or the spread of dangerous diseases, more particularly in regard to the sanitation of places where a number of persons are employed, and to the safeguarding of the public from infection from carcasses of animals. A special provision is taken to enable municipalities to combat malaria.

Clause 377 introduces a power to the Health Officer to see to vaccination within a municipality.

Chapter XV.

Chapter XV is also a new chapter, dealing with hospitals, dispensaries, child-welfare and school hygiene. The present power of the Commissioners to contribute to the maintenance of hospitals, dispensaries, etc., has been carried forward in the Bill to the chapter on Municipal property and finance [vide item (xi) of sub-clause (1) of clause 96].

Clause 378 gives detailed powers to the Commissioners to establish their own hospitals and dispensaries.

Clause 379 provides for the maintenance of midwives and health-visitors. In the case of midwives, it is made legal to impose a fee, but it is not intended that fees shall be imposed for the service of health-visitors whose duties will be advisory, though their qualifications will be prescribed. The municipality may themselves offer a salary to a health-visitor if they think fit to do so.

Clause 380 gives to the Local Government the power of making rules for child-welfare and for the proper care of maternity cases. It is necessary that municipalities should take steps to prevent to a greater extent, than is at present the case, the heavy infant mortality that takes place in urban areas in this province. Provision has been taken for the proper sanitary inspection of schools and colleges in the interests of the people.

Chapter XVI.

Clauses 381 and 382.—These clauses reproduce the provisions of the existing Part XIA of the present Act in regard to the extinction and prevention of fire.

Clause 383 introduces provisions for the safeguarding of urban areas by the power of inspection and seizure and confiscation of dangerous and inflammable materials improperly stored within a municipality.

Clause 384 also provides for the regulation of the stacking or collecting of hay, straw, wood, thatching grass, jute or other inflammable materials.

Clause 385 provides for the making of by-laws not only in regard to municipal fire-brigades but also in regard to any volunteer fire-brigades which the Commissioners may recognise.

Chapter XVII.

Markets and slaughter-houses.

Clause 386, which is based on the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, amplifies section 335 of the existing Act. Attention is invited to sub-clause (3) whereby the Commissioners may, in the interests of the public, cancel the license of any person who closes his shop to the inconvenience of the public. A similar power in regard to private licensed markets has been taken under sub-clause (2) of clause 389.

Clause 387 gives definite power to the Commissioners to close any municipal market.

Clause 388 is based on the Madras law, and gives power for the removal of unauthorised persons selling their wares in a municipal market.

Clause 389 deals with the regulation of, and grant of licenses for, private markets.

Clause 390 enables the Commissioners to apply to the Magistrate in order to close any unlicensed place which is used as a market.

Clause 391 brings into the municipal law the provisions formerly contained in the Bengal Municipal (Slaughter-houses and Meat-markets) Act, 1865, following the form adopted by the United Provinces in their legislation.

Clause 392 is also based on the provisions of the Bengal Municipal (Slaughter-houses and Meat-markets) Act, 1865.

Clause 393 brings together the various provisions in regard to the proper construction and care of private markets or private slaughter-houses, particularly in regard to the draining and cleansing of such places. The fixed period of 30 days before a penalty can be imposed is removed, the matter being dealt with on the general lines of failure to comply with a requisition.

Clause 394 provides for the construction of proper approaches and streets to or in private markets, and for the defining of the limits of such markets.

Clause 395 gives detailed powers for the ejectment of persons who have been convicted of contravening any by-law made under section 396 from markets or slaughter-houses, and for the prevention of such persons carrying on their business there in future and for the removal by owners of private markets of tenants convicted of contravening such by-laws.

Clauses 396 and 397 correspond to sections 339, 341, 342 and 343 of the existing Act.

Clause 398 gives detailed powers of making by-laws in regard to markets and slaughter-houses, particularly in regard to the proper cleansing and sanitary condition of the same and the care of animals, and the prevention of cruelty, nuisances and obstruction.

Chapter XVIII.

Chapter XVIII is also new and provides for the regulation by the Commissioners of weights and measures to be in use in the municipality. This chapter is only to be in force in municipalities to which it has been specially extended. The provisions of this chapter are the result of consultation with various local bodies as to simple regulations which may be enforced in a mufassal municipality.

Clause 401.—The standard weights which are to be adopted when this chapter is enforced are the Government standard weights which are described in this clause, and under clause 400 power is taken for the destruction of false weights and measures.

Chapter XIX.

The provisions of Chapter XIX are to some extent supplementary to the provisions of the Bengal Food Adulteration Act, which has fairly recently been passed by the Council. They are mainly taken from the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923. The provisions of sections 249 to 257 of the existing Act have been found by the municipalities to be wholly inadequate for the purpose of preventing the sale of unwholesome food. The main principle of this chapter, however, remains as in the existing Act, and is that, although the executive of the municipality may take the initiative in the prevention of the sale of unsound or unwholesome food, final orders in the matter are to be passed by an independent magisterial authority.

Clause 402 provides for the licensing of persons who carry on the trade of butcher or who sell meat, game, poultry, fish, etc.

Clause 403 provides for the establishment of municipal bakeries and sweetmeat shops.

Clause 404 is based on the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, but is extended to the sale of confectionery, ice and aerated-waters. The licensing of dairymen, bakers, confectioners, sweetmeat makers and ice or aerated-water manufacturers is a most necessary addition to the law as a safeguard to the public health.

Clause 405 is based on the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, and prohibits the sale of diseased, unsound or unwholesome food or drugs.

Clause 406 introduces a salutary provision, taken from the Public Health Acts of Fiji and Trinidad, for the keeping of bread-stuffs, cake, pastry, sweetmeats and confectionery in properly covered utensils or receptacles when exposed for sale, as a protection against dirt, dust and flies.

Clauses 407 and 408 provide for the proper regulation of the compounding and sale of drugs recognised by the British Pharmacopœa, and for the proper qualification of compounders to compound such drugs.

Clause 409, as in the case of the existing law, exempts indigenous medicines from any such control, provided they are not sold in places where drugs recognised by the British Pharmacopœa are sold upon prescription. Some control over such drugs can, however, be exercised under the provisions of clause 405.

Clause 410.—The provisions of clause 410 are taken partly from the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, and the Punjab Law, and provide for the inspection of places where unlawful slaughter of animals or sale of flesh is suspected. They are not, however, so severe as those of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, or the Punjab Law, in that it is necessary for the searching officer to obtain a warrant before he can make an entry.

Clause 411 gives powers of inspection of food and drugs on the same lines as sections 251B and 253 of the existing Act. The provisions, however, are more detailed, and the burden of proof is thrown on the party charged where unsound articles of food and drugs are found in places where articles of food and drugs are ordinarily kept or exposed for sale.

Clause 412 provides for the seizure of utensils. The provisions of this clause in regard to tea are made stringent (vide the Explanation).

Clause 413 provides for the destruction of articles of a perishable nature if they are found to be diseased, unsound, unwholesome or unfit for human food.

Clause 414 introduces provisions in regard to unwholesome food or drugs on the same lines as those contained in clause 410 in regard to the sale of flesh.

Clause 415 provides for the production before the Magistrate of living things, articles of food, drugs, utensils or vessels which have been seized, but which have not been destroyed according to law, and for the decision of the Magistrate as to whether these things shall be destroyed or not, and also for compensation in the case of unjustified seizure.

Clause 416 vests in the Commissioners the property in any living thing, food or drug condemned under this chapter.

Clause 417 enables the municipalities to take measures to ensure purity of the milk-supply. It must be read with clauses 404 and 406 and also with item (xxi) of sub-clause (1) of clause 96 under which the Commissioners are entitled to maintain their own dairy-farms, grazing-grounds and milk-depôts for the benefit of the inhabitants. The provisions which are detailed are based on the Public Health Acts of Fiji and South Africa, special care being enjoined in regard to the receptacles in which milk is kept, and to ventilation and the proper care of cattle.

Chapter XX.

Clauses 418 to 423 reproduce the existing law in regard to burial or burning grounds with a few minor alterations and amplifications.

The provisions contained in existing section 256 as to taking over buildings attached to closed burning or burial grounds are omitted.

Clause 424, sub-clause (2), introduces an important provision in regard to the safeguarding of the public from infection and contagion from the bodies of persons who have died from infectious and contagious diseases and for the rapid disposal of such bodies.

No important changes have been introduced in clauses 425 to 427. They follow substantially the existing law.

Clause 428.—The appointment of a Registrar and sub-Registrars for the purpose of the correct compilation of vital statistics is explained in the Statement of Objects and Reasons.

Clause 431 provides more fully for the procedure in regard to the registration of births and notices of deaths. The object of this clause is not only to ensure correct returns but also to enable the Public Health Department to put its machinery in motion where this is necessary.

Chapter XXI.

Chapter XXI deals with the more summary measures to be adopted in dealing with nuisances which are a cause of annoyance to the inhabitants of a municipality or the public in general or injurious or dangerous to health. It reproduces in clause 432 a statement of many of the conditions which are enumerated in earlier clauses in the Bill, and it provides a procedure which in most cases is alternative to the procedure laid down in the earlier chapters. The definition of "author of a nuisance" in this connection is important as it enables the municipality to proceed under this chapter against any person by whose act, default or sufferance the nuisance is caused.

Clause 433, sub-clause (1), imposes on the Commissioners the duty of inspecting the municipality from time to time to see that nuisances do not exist, and sub-clause (2) enables them to enter any premises for the purposes of such inspection whenever they have reasonable grounds to believe that a nuisance exists therein and to open the subsoil and test the drains in cases where this is necessary.

Clause 434 enables any person to give information to the Commissioners of the existence of a nuisance and lays on municipal officers and police officers the duty of doing so.

Clause 435 enables the Commissioners to serve a summary notice on the author of a nuisance or the owner or occupier of the dwelling or premises calling on him to take action for its removal. In the event of his failing to do so, action is to be taken under clause 436 through the Magistrate who may either require him to remove the nuisance, or order the Commissioners to remove it and to realise the costs from the author of the nuisance or the owner or occupier of the premises. Action under this clause may also be taken where the nuisance has been removed but is likely to recur.

Clause 437 provides for the recovery of costs from the author of the nuisance, where the owner or occupier of the premises is not known or cannot be found.

Clause 438 enables the Magistrate to award compensation to a person on whom a notice has been served for the removal of a nuisance or to any other person if, in his opinion that person would have been entitled to compensation if the proceedings had been taken against him otherwise than under this chapter and that the case is a fit one for the grant of compensation.

Chapter XXII.

Clause 439.—The existing Act makes no proper provision for supervision by the Commissioners of education in municipalities. This clause, therefore, provides for the appointment of an Education Committee somewhat on the lines laid down in section 65B of the Bengal Local Self-Government Act of 1885. Power has also been taken under items (ix) and (x) of sub-clause (1) of clause 96 to enable municipalities to contribute towards the efficient management of schools within their jurisdiction and also to grant scholarships.

Clause 440 defines generally the powers of the municipalities in regard to schools maintained by them or to which they make grants-in-aid.

Clause 441 enables the Local Government to regulate the percentage of the income of the municipality which is to be applied to primary education in cases where a special education cess is not levied under the Bengal Primary Education Act of 1919. It will be noted that it is not proposed that that part of the income of the municipality, which is derived from the lighting, water and conservancy rates and is applicable only to those essential services, should be diverted to this purpose.

Clause 442 enables the Local Government to assist the Commissioners with funds for educational purposes and provides for the proper allocation of such funds when such grants are made by Government.

Clause 443 gives the Local Government a rule-making power with a view to the maintenance of standard methods of educational management in the various municipalities.

Clause 444 provides for the duties of the Board of Public Health in regard to matters of municipal administration affecting the public health.

Clause 445 introduces a necessary provision for the regulation of sarais, dharamsalas and lodging-houses. This should be read with the definition of "lodging-house" contained in item (30) of clause 3. The provisions of this clause cover generally the proper lodging of pilgrims and travellers of the poorer classes.

Clause 446 enables the Commissioners to deal with hackney-carriage drivers if they refuse to ply for hire and thereby deprive the public of the necessary means of conveyance for which licenses have been granted to the hackney-carriage drivers. The necessary power has also been taken to deal with the owners.

Clauses 447 and 448 amplify the present general provisions contained in section 223 of the existing Act. It has been found in practice that a survey of municipal land should include a proper survey of buildings also.

Detailed provisions are made for the entertainment of professional surveyors and also for the maintenance by the Commissioners of the survey record by means of by-laws under which changes in the map, caused by property-owners, are to be notified by them in order that the map may be corrected. Suitable boundary-marks shall also be set up to define the limits of holdings.

Clause 449 amplifies the provisions of the present section 213 relating to the destruction of stray dogs.

Clause 450 enables suspected dogs to be properly segregated so as to avoid destruction of animals which may be found not to have been infected.

Clause 451 merely reproduces section 214 of the existing Act.

Clause 452 reproduces section 359 of the existing Act.

Clause 453 applies the principle which is contained in section 278 of the present Act in regard to the licensing of premises for particular purposes to the cancellation of such licenses when the premises are used otherwise than for those purposes.

Chapter XXIII.

Clause 454.—The provisions relating to hill municipalities have been collected from the body of the Act and brought together in Chapter XXIII. The main portion of the Act will, of course, apply to hill municipalities with certain exceptions. The main exceptions are those enumerated in clause 454.

A necessary extension of the definition of "drain" is introduced in clause 455 when applying that definition to hill municipalities.

Clause 456 collects together the definitions applicable to hill municipalities which are at present scattered over section 6 of the existing Act.

Clauses 457 to 463 reproduce the provisions of sections 201A to 201G of the existing Act, and clauses 434 and 435 reproduce the provisions of the existing sections 207 and 207A.

Clause 466.—This clause should be read with section 201 of the existing Act and with clause 219 of the Bill. The latter clause will apply to public roads generally, including roads in hill municipalities.

Clauses 467 and 468 reproduce the provisions of sections 224B, 224C and 244Z of the existing Act.

Clauses 469 and 470 reproduce the provisions of sections 227 and 228 of the existing Act.

Clauses 471 and 472 reproduce the provisions of sections 210B and 210C of the existing Act.

Clauses 473 to 477 reproduce the provisions of sections 240A to 240E of the existing Act.

Clause 478 reproduces existing section 244V and clauses 479 to 483 the provisions of existing sections 351D to 351H.

Clause 484 is based on the existing section 350A, but it is grouped more homogenously.

Sub-clause (a) regulates the actual control of the hillsides.

Sub-clause (b) corresponds to the first words of sub-clause (a) of section 350.

Sub-clauses (c), (d) and (e) introduce the traffic provisions necessary in a hill municipality.

Sub-clauses (f) and (g) are reproduced from section 350A of the existing Act.

Sub-clause (h) is consequential on the main clauses relating to hill municipalities.

Chapter XXIV.

Clause 485.—The penalty sections of the existing Act, which are scattered throughout the Act, have been grouped together on the same principle as in the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923. Where, however, there is a power to impose imprisonment as well as fine, the point has been emphasised by the penalty being entered in a separate clause of the Bill (vide, for example, the clauses in regard to election offences).

Clause 486 deals with the penalties in regard to the erection of new buildings and additions and alterations to existing buildings. These matters cannot suitably be dealt with in a general penalty clause which merely enumerates the subject-matter.

Clause 487 appears as a separate clause in virtue of the sentence of imprisonment which a Magistrate is empowered to impose on persons falling within its scope.

Clause 488 gives the usual power in regard to the attachment of a penalty to a breach of by-laws.

Clause 489 reproduces existing section 366.

Chapter XXV.

Clause 490 should be read with clause 492.

The existing section 351 deals with the procedure for publishing by-laws, etc. It is desirable to have a uniform system in regard to the publication of by-laws, orders and public notices, etc.

Clause 491.—The main provisions of the existing Act in regard to the making of rules and by-laws are brought up to date by recognising the practice of issuing model rules and by-laws and the fact that, where a standard form of rule or by-law is adopted, it is not necessary to go through a lengthy procedure. It also provides for the rescinding of model rules and by-laws by the Local Government.

Clause 493 provides for facsimile signatures being used in notices, etc., in order to save work to the municipal staff.

Clause 494 provides in detail for the persons who are empowered to issue notices, by-laws, summonses, etc.

Clauses 495 and 496 set out the procedure for the service of notices, by-laws, summonses, etc. This procedure is practically the same as in the existing Act, though the clauses have been re-arranged for the purpose of greater clearness.

Clauses 497 and 498 collect together the provisions in regard to the power of entry. The wording is based on the existing Madras Act and on the existing section 351C. Similarly powers have been taken in the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923.

Clause 499 provides against the obstruction of the Commissioners or any of their officers and servants in carrying out their duties under this Act. It has been drafted so as also to cover the cases of officers who may be called upon to assist the Commissioners in effecting an entry.

Clause 500.—The existing provisions of section 175 are extended to requisitions made under any part of the Act, and such requisitions may be enforced against the owners and occupiers of lands and buildings and not only of lands which is the case under the present Act.

Clause 501 reproduces the provisions of section 176 of the existing Act. It is not, of course, applicable to proceedings for the removal of nuisances which are of an urgent nature. (In such cases the party has his opportunity of defending the case in the Magistrate's Court.)

Clauses 502 and 503 reproduce the provisions of sections 177 and 178 of the existing Act.

Clause 504 reproduces the provisions of section 179 of the existing Act with a small consequential amendment.

Clause 505 reproduces the provisions of section 180 of the existing Act with the addition of sub-clause (2) to make it clear that punishment for failure to obey a requisition does not close the matter. It might pay a defaulter to pay the penalty on each occasion rather than carry out a necessary work.

Clause 506 reproduces the provisions of section 181 of the existing Act with an amendment made consequentially to the enlargement of the scope of clause 500.

Clauses 507 and 508 reproduce the provisions of sections 182 and 183 of the existing Act with amendments on the same principle.

Clauses 509 and 510 reproduce the provisions of sections 360 and 361 of the present Act.

Clause 511 reproduces the provisions of section 212 of the present Act, except that it undergoes consequential enlargement on the same principle as clause 500.

Clause 512 reproduces the provisions of section 211 of the existing Act with a minor drafting amendment.

Clause 513 has been taken from the Bombay Act so as to avoid a lacuna in the existing law in regard to persons who damage municipal property. There is no corresponding section in the Bengal Act.

Clause 514 makes clear the position of agents and trustees in regard to property within a municipality of which they are agents or trustees. A similar provision has been inserted in the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923.

Clause 515.—The principle of section 242A in regard to appeals in respect of buildings, etc., has been extended to appeals in regard to various other matters dealt with under the Bill. Where, however, the Commissioners under the Bill must only exercise at a meeting powers, which could formerly be exercised otherwise than at a meeting, it is not necessary to provide for an appeal.

Clause 516 follows section 352 of the existing Act, but also covers prosecutions for breaches of rules and by-laws.

Clause 517 reproduces the provisions of section 352 of the existing Act, except that it also covers prosecutions for breach of a rule.

Clause 518 reproduces the provisions of section 365 of the existing Act, with minor drafting amendments.

Clause 519 follows in the main the provisions of section 363 of the existing Act, but is enlarged on the same principles as have already been approved in the Village Self-Government Act (vide section 64 of that Act).

Clause 520 reproduces the provisions of sections 184 and 185 of the existing Act with a minor drafting modification.

Clause 521 reproduces the provisions of sections 316 and 358 of the existing Act, but it is made fuller, and the drafting of the United Provinces Act in this connection has been adopted.

Clause 522 is based on section 128 of the existing Act.

Clause 523 gives the Commissioners a discretion in deciding as to the persons who are bound to perform municipal duties, etc., or who have various rights in connection with municipal affairs. It is based on the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923.

Clause 524 makes clear the position of municipal officers, servants, contractors and agents as public servants. A similar provision exists in the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923.

Clause 525 provides for the prohibition of obstruction to municipal contractors and is also based on the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923.

Clause 526 provides against the removal of boundary marks without the permission of the Commissioners.

Clause 528 gives the same power of delegation as exists in the present Act between the Local Government and the Commissioners of Divisions, except that the delegation is more general, only the constitutional provisions being excluded from the power of delegation.

Clause 529 is based on the existing section 64, but has been enlarged on the same principle as is adopted in the United Provinces Act, to enable the Commissioner, District Magistrate or Subdivisional Officer to call for reports and returns and copies of documents and to place before the Commissioners in writing his views on any matter concerning the municipality.

Clause 530 removes the lacuna in the existing Act in regard to the power of certain officers of Government to inspect municipal institutions, registers, accounts, etc.

Clause 531 enables the public health authorities to place their views on any matter of public health before the Commissioners, and the same power is granted to Inspectors of Schools in regard to educational matters in the municipality.

Clause 532 reproduces the provisions of section 63 of the existing Act.

Clause 533 reproduces the provisions of the first two paragraphs of the existing section 64. The third paragraph is dealt with under clause 535.

Clause 534.—This clause, as is explained in the Statement of Objects and Reasons, provides for the supersession of a particular department of a municipality, in connection with which there is gross mismanagement or persistent default or an abuse of power by the Commissioners. The provision is less drastic than the supersession of the whole municipality.

Clause 535 is on the lines of the third paragraph of the existing section 64.

Clause 536.—This clause is explained fully in the Statement of Objects and Reasons.

Clause 537 reproduces the provisions of section 65 of the existing Act.

Clause 538 reproduces the provisions of section 66 of the existing Act. This is the extreme case in which the Local Government is compelled to supersede a municipality.

Clause 539 enables the Local Government to withdraw sections that are extended by them to any municipality. It applies the general principles which are contained in the General Clauses Act.

Clause 540 reproduces the provisions of section 66A of the existing Act.

Clause 541 contains a power to the Local Government in regard to the alteration of the schedules, except in such matters as are basic to the Act or are provided for elsewhere therein.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE ROYAL BOTANIC GARDEN AND THE GARDENS IN CALCUTTA AND OF THE LLOYD BOTANIC GARDEN, DARJEELING, FOR 1922-23.

ROYAL BOTANIC GARDEN.

1. General.—For botanical operations the season was favourable. The early rains in June prevented serious results from the prolonged period of drought experienced during the latter part of the hot weather. Rainfall during the year was in excess of the average, so that, with the garden lakes well filled towards the end of the rainy season, very little pumping was necessary throughout the dry cold weather months. A certain much-needed relief to garden finances resulted in the shape of diminished pumping charges.

Works of a special nature int he garden include the erection of twenty-six new cooly huts, thirteen of which were completed within the year. For years past the condition of accommodation for the labour force has been far from satisfactory, the huts in use being old, dilapidated and ramshackle. No labour force could possibly be expected to remain healthy, let alone contented, in the conditions which existed, and as, with retrenchment, the most pressing need—help from sources other than garden funds proper—could not be anticipated, the only course left was to divert part of the grant available for garden upkeep to this very necessary item of housing improvement. The scheme as planned could not be completed within the year, but will gradually be pushed on as funds permit.

On the western side a new gate has been opened near the Banyan tree, intended to give easy access to the garden to residents living in that quarter.

The Oreodoxa Avenue and the Orchid House were selected for special renovation and a new vista opened out with the intention of providing a view into the garden from the riverside. Very little work could be done on the river bank, and nothing beyond trivial patching given to the roads. These are now in such a state of disrepair that a special grant will be necessary sooner or later to bring them into a condition in keeping with the rest of the garden. Fast and incessant motor traffic such as the roads were never built to carry is responsible for their wear. To set a limit of speed in the garden is just as difficult as it may be to do so in Chowringhee, but the exclusion of motor traffic cannot now reasonably be suggested, and the only course left is to equip the roads to suit the changed conditions. It is hoped that means to recondition them will be available ere they get beyond repair.

The display of annuals though, somewhat late, was quite up to standard, as was also the Orchid House at the end of the cold and beginning of the hot weather.

2. Plant and seed exchange.—Over 55,000 plants were distributed, of which some 28,000 were trees for roadside and other planting. Nearly 9,000 shrubs and 2,600 palms were sent out to Government institutions, district boards and municipalities, the balance of the total distribution being made up of climbers, ferns and surplus annuals. Three hundred packets and 86 lbs. of seeds were distributed as was also the recurring supply of barrels of mahogany seed received from Kew. Over 5,000 plants were received by the garden, the bulk consisting of Gladiolus bulbs and orchids.

3. Herbarium and Library.—Work has been carried out along the usual lines, aid in the herbarium being given by Messrs. Debbarman and Narayanswami of the Botanical Survey of India Department. Over 5,000 specimens have been incorporated in the herbarium, the chief addition being duplicates of South Indian plants provided by Mr. C. E. C. Fischer of the Madras Forest Department. His gift of these plants is the more welcome that it helps to replace a loss of South Indian plants incurred at sea during the war. Many of the herbarium cabinets are now getting overstocked and some rearrangement and additional cabinet provision will become necessary in the near future. Sheets on loan for scientific work to the number of 1,200 were sent out during the year, while about 3,000 specimens, mostly duplicates of Malayan species, were distributed to herbaria in Europe and elsewhere.

Work in progress in the herbarium includes the preparation by Lieutenant-Colonel A. T. Gage and Mr. Debbarman of a catalogue intended to provide information regarding the introduction, flowering and fruiting times and economic uses of the non-herbaceous phanerogams in the garden ; also the preparation by the writer and Mr. Narayanswami of a catalogue of Indian plants not included in Hooker's Flora of British India. The more important collections dealt with include that made by Colonel Gage and Mr. P. T. Russel in the Tavoy cinchona area. A preliminary examination indicates the presence in this collection of several undescribed species, but examination at Kew with authentic material—especially recently acquired Siamese plants—is advisable before deciding on what is new to science. Descriptions in English and drawings of "possibles" have, however, been prepared by Mr. Narayanswami to aid more critical examination when this can be done.

Library work has gone on as usual, 142 books, 53 periodicals and 234 irregular publications being received. As with other departments, the Library has had to stand its share of retrenchment.

4. Publications.—The distribution of Part II of Volume XII of the Annals of the Garden as well as of the appendix to Volume XI, which has long been in suspension on account of insufficiency of funds, is slowly going on as conditions allow. A fairly large consignment has recently gone out, and it is hoped to get the distribution completed in the course of the current year.

5. Financial.—Out of a total allotment of Rs. 73,880 for staff and permanent establishment, Rs. 66,244 were spent, the balance being savings due to officers on leave. There were compulsory savings of Rs. 2,800 and Rs. 2,000 under "Temporary establishment" and "Contract contingencies" respectively, and Rs. 5,484 reserved for purchase and freight on Europe stores remained unspent due to the non-arrival of these stores. Revenue being sale-proceeds of surplus plants and foreshore rent amounted to Rs. 5,017.

6. Staff.—Lieutenant-Colonel A. T. Gage, C.I.E., I.M.S., held charge as Superintendent till 2nd January 1923, when he went on leave preparatory to retirement. From this date till the end of the year the writer held charge. Mr. P. M. Debbarman officiated as Curator of the herbarium from the 1st April till the 26th June 1923 and again from the 3rd January 1923 till the end of the year. Between these periods the writer held charge of this, his substantive post.

Mr. G. T. Lane was Curator of the garden from 1st April till 6th May 1922, when he went on leave preparatory to retirement. With his retirement on the 2nd February 1923 Government loses an officer of long and faithful service. Mr. Lane first joined the garden staff some thirty-two years ago under the then Superintendent Sir George King, who early formed a high opinion of his character and abilities. Mr. Lane saw service under several Superintendents and acting Superintendents, and it is sufficient to say that all have left records endorsing the high opinion of him which Sir George King was first in a position to form. His relations with garden labour were particularly happy. Firmness combined with sympathy and tact were amongst Mr. Lane's natural gifts enabling him to command as loyal service from those placed in his charge as he himself never failed to give.

Mr. W. V. North was Assistant Curator from 1st April till 6th May 1922, thereafter officiating Curator till Mr. Lane's retirement, when he occupied the post substantively. Mr. S. N. Basu was overseer from 1st April till 6th May 1922 and thereafter officiating Assistant Curator. Mr. Merlin Jones was overseer and Babu Santosh Kumar Mitra head clerk throughout the year. All officers and the clerical staff have performed their duties satisfactorily.

CALCUTTA GARDENS.

Work in these gardens was mostly of a routine nature, but considerable additional expenditure over the normal was incurred by the renovation of the roads in Dalhousie Square. Some 30 unrepresented plants were planted out and about 200 new plants put into Dalhousie Square, while the widening of Dalhousie Square (West) necessitated the cutting out of several trees and shrubs. The annuals made quite a good show under the careful attention of Messrs. Mitra and Quasim Ali, the Assistant Curator and overseer. Out of a total allotment of Rs. 46,502, Rs. 4,517 were saved mainly on salaries, house-rent and other allowances. The revenue, being fishing fees from Dalhousie tank, amounted to Rs. 130.

LLOYD BOTANIC GARDEN, DARJEELING.

To do justice to the work so ably carried on by Mr. Cave in this model little garden would require a voluminous report in itself. Besides routine garden work, which in itself takes constant supervision, the Curator finds time for many of the more technical problems associated with the science of Horticulture and Botany. His work in the distribution of plants and seeds especially calls for commendation. The distributions during the year under review are the highest in the history of the garden. In spite of pressing financial difficulties the injury to the garden referred to in last year's report is gradually being made good, and a special feature of the year was a successful attempt to arrest the subsidence of the south-west corner of the garden where the nurseries are situated. Out of a total allotment of Rs. 21,572 there was a small net saving of Rs. 420.

42. (1) Where at an inquiry into an election petition any candidate, other than the returned candidate, claims the seat for himself, the returned candidate or any other party may give evidence to prove that the election of such candidate would have been void if he had been the returned candidate and a petition had been presented complaining of his election :

Provided that the returned candidate or such other party as aforesaid shall not be entitled to give such evidence unless he has, within fourteen days from the date of the publication of the election petition under clause (b) of sub-rule (2) of rule 36, given notice of his intention to the Commissioners and made the deposit and procured the execution of the bond referred to in rules 35 and 36, respectively.

"180A. (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in section 180, when a raiyat who is or who but for the operation of section 180 in respect of land held under the custom of utbandi would have been, a settled raiyat of the village, holds or has held under the custom of utbandi, or under any form of tenancy locally known as utbandi land (hereinafter referred to as utbandi land), either the landlord or the raiyat may apply to have a uniform annual money rent determined for the land.

(2) The application shall include at the discretion of the applicant either—

(b) all the lands held in the same village under the same landlord by the raiyat which the raiyat, or any deceased person whose heir he is, has cultivated as utbandi land at any time during the preceding period of six years if he or the said deceased person is the last person to have cultivated the land and has not or had not acquired occupancy rights therein, or

(c) both.

(3) Subject to the provisions of sub-section (2), a single application may be made by a landlord in respect of lands held as utbandi lands in the same village by one or more raiyats under him and a joint application may be made by two or more raiyats in respect of lands held by them as utbandi lands in the same village under the same landlord.

(6) The officer receiving the application or the officer to whom the case is transferred, as the case may be, shall cause notice to be given in the prescribed manner to the opposite party, and shall fix a date for the determination of the case.

If the immediate landlord of the raiyat is a temporary tenure-holder or ijaradar the officer receiving the application shall also give notice to the superior landlord in the lowest degree, who is a proprietor or permanent tenure-holder.

(7) If the application is made in respect of lands in which the raiyat has not acquired occupancy rights, the officer may reject it in respect of such lands, if he is satisfied in view of all the circumstances of the case that it is unreasonable to grant it:

(Section 2.)

(8) If the application is not rejected, the officer shall then determine the sum to be paid as a uniform annual money rent, and also in the case of lands in which the raiyat has not acquired occupancy rights, a premium to be paid to the landlord, and he shall order that the raiyat shall, in lieu of paying the rent for the land as utbandi land, pay the sum so determined and the premium, if any:

No order shall be set aside on application made under this proviso unless notice thereof has been served on the respondent thereto.

(9) In making the determination of the sum to be paid as rent, the officer shall calculate the average of the amount that was actually paid or payable as rent for the land for the previous six years and shall ordinarily declare the same as the sum to be paid as rent:

Provided that the officer may also take into consideration—

(11) If the immediate landlord of the raiyat is a temporary tenure-holder or ijaradar the officer shall apportion the premium payable under sub-section (10) between the said temporary tenure-holder or ijaradar and his superior landlord of the lowest degree who is a proprietor or permanent tenure-holder in such manner as may appear fair and reasonable to the officer in view of all the circumstances of the case, and any sum so awarded to the said superior landlord shall be recoverable by him from the temporary tenure-holder or ijaradar or his successor in interest as an arrear of rent but shall not be recoverable by the superior landlord from the raiyat.

(12) The order shall be in writing, shall state the grounds on which it is made, and shall, in the absence of any special reasons to the contrary recorded in writing, take effect from the beginning of the agricultural year next after the date on which it is made.

(13) The officer shall fix the date (not being more than one month from the date of the order) by which the premium shall be paid or he may, on the application of the raiyat, order that the premium shall be paid by instalments not exceeding three in number, that the first instalment shall be paid at the beginning of the agricultural year in which the rent settled under sub-section (8) takes effect and that one of the remaining instalments shall be paid at the beginning of each of the succeeding agricultural years until the premium is paid in full.

(14) The premium or any instalment thereof shall be recoverable as rent and if the premium or any instalment thereof is not paid by the date fixed under sub-section (13) for the payment of such premium or instalment the landlord may make a requisition to the Collector for the recovery of the arrear of the same in the manner set forth in sub-sections (3) and (4) of section 158A, and the provisions of sub-sections (5) to (9) of that section shall apply to the recovery of the said arrear by the Collector as if it were an arrear of rent, recoverable by him under the provisions of that section.

Interest shall not be payable on any instalment in respect of which default has not been made.

The Local Government may make rules prescribing the form of requisition to be made by a landlord under this sub-section and for carrying into effect the purposes of this sub-section.

(15) Any order made under this section shall be subject to appeal in the manner provided in section 109A, unless the application has been made in the course of proceedings under Part II of Chapter X, in which case the provisions of sections 1010 and 1011 shall apply.

(16) An application made under sub-section (1) may be amended if it appears at any time to the officer prior to the issue of the order under sub-section (7) or sub-section (8) or to the appellate or revisional Court that it does not comply with the provisions of sub-section (2) but that it can be brought into conformity with that sub-section. Such amendment may be made either on the initiative of the parties or either of them or of the officer or Court but it shall not be made unless prior notice thereof is given to the parties, and, if such amendment is made, it shall be made only on such terms or conditions as to such officer or Court shall appear to be just.

(17) Notwithstanding anything contained elsewhere in this Act or in any other law, no suit shall be brought or application made in any Court in respect of any order passed under this section, save as is provided in this section.

"180B. Whenever an order under section 180A is passed determining a uniform annual money rent for any lands, such lands shall cease to be held as utbandi lands with effect from the date from which the new rent takes effect, and the tenant shall hold them as an occupancy raiyat from the date of the order.

Period for which rent fixed under section 180A to remain unaltered.

180C. (1) Where a uniform annual money rent has been fixed under section 180A, the said rent shall not, except on the ground of a landlord's improvement or of a subsequent alteration of the area of the holding, be enhanced for fifteen years; nor shall it be reduced for fifteen years, save on the ground of alteration in the area of the holding, or on the ground specified in clause (a) of sub-section (1) of section 38.

the following amendments be made in rules 626 and 627 of the rules published in Volume I of the Bengal Jail Code, Sixth Edition, namely :—

I. For rule 626 of the said rules substitute the following, namely :—

626. (1) The following persons shall be liable to be classified as "habitual criminals," namely :—

(i) any person convicted of an offence punishable under Chapters XII, XVII and XVIII of the Indian Penal Code, whose previous conviction or convictions, taken in conjunction with the facts of the present case, show that he is by habit a robber, house-breaker, dacoit, thief, or receiver of stolen property, or that he habitually commits extortion, cheating, counterfeiting coin, currency notes or stamps or forgery ;

(ii) any person convicted of an offence punishable under Chapter XVI of the Indian Penal Code, whose previous conviction or convictions, taken in conjunction with the facts of the present case, show that he habitually commits offences against the person ;

(iii) any person committed to or detained in prison under section 123 (read with section 109 or section 110) of the Code of Criminal Procedure ,

(iv) any person convicted of any of the offences specified in (i) above when it appears from the facts of the case, even although no previous conviction has been proved, that he is by habit a member of a gang of dacoits, or of thieves or a dealer in slaves or in stolen property ;

(v) any member of a criminal tribe, subject to the discretion of the local Government concerned ;

(vi) any person convicted of any offence and sentenced to imprisonment under the corresponding sections of the Indian Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure as applied by order under the Indian (Foreign Jurisdiction) Order in Council, 1902, or by the authority of any Prince or State in India ;

(vii) any person convicted by a court or tribunal acting outside India under the general or special authority of His Majesty of an offence which would have rendered him liable to be classified as a habitual criminal if he had been convicted in a court established in British India.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this definition the word "conviction" shall include an order made under section 118, read with section 110, of the Criminal Procedure Code.

(2) The classification of a convicted person as a habitual criminal should ordinarily be made by the convicting court, but if the convicting court omits to do so, such classification may be made by the District Magistrate, or, in the absence of an order by the convicting court or District Magistrate, and pending the result of a reference to the District Magistrate, by the officer in charge of the jail where such convicted person is confined :

Provided that any person classed as a habitual criminal may apply for a revision of the order.

(3) The convicting court or the District Magistrate may, for reasons to be recorded in writing, direct that any convicted person or any person committed to, or detained in, prison under section 123 read with section 109 or section 110 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, shall not be classed as a habitual criminal and may revise such direction.

(4) Convicting courts or District Magistrates, as the case may be, may revise their own classifications, and the District Magistrate may alter any classification of a prisoner made by a convicting court or any other authority provided that the alteration is made on the basis of facts which were not before such court or authority.

NOTE.—The expression "District Magistrate" wherever it occurs in sub-rules (2), (3) and (4) above means the District Magistrate of the district in which the criminal was convicted, committed or detained. The expression includes a Presidency Magistrate.

(5) Every habitual criminal shall, as far as possible, be confined in a special jail in which no prisoner other than habitual criminals shall be kept :

Provided that the Inspector-General of Prisons may transfer to this special jail any prisoner, not being a habitual criminal, whom, for reasons to be recorded in writing, he believes to be of so vicious or depraved a character and to exercise, or to be likely to exercise, so evil an influence on his fellow-prisoners that he ought not to be confined with other non-habitual prisoners, but a prisoner so transferred shall not otherwise be subject to the special rules affecting habitual criminals.

(6) The expression 'District Magistrate' in sub-rules (2), (3) and (4) shall be deemed to include an Additional District Magistrate.

II. Delete rule 627 of the said rules.

5. (a) Boilers not complying with standard requirements.—Boilers not fully complying with the Standard Requirements may, with the approval of the Chief Inspector, be allowed to work at a lower pressure than would otherwise be permitted, but no structural part of a boiler made of Bessemer process steel or of cast or malleable cast iron shall be accepted if such part is subject to pressure.

(b) (i) Modification of formulae.—Under the Regulations for determining the working pressure to be allowed on various parts of boilers, the material (except where specifically indicated) to which the formulæ apply shall be steel complying with the requirements of Chapter II.

(ii) Where no test certificates for shell plates and rivets are produced, the material shall be treated as iron. If, however, in such cases the Inspector is clearly satisfied that the material is of good quality, a higher strength than that allowed for iron may be permitted but the strength of the shell plates shall not, in general, be assumed to be more than 26 tons. In such cases S and S in equations 1, 3 and 4 of Chapter III may be respectively 26 and 21 for steel and 21 and 18 for iron. For iron across the grain S may be 18.

(iii) Where end plates, furnaces, flat plates, girders, gusset and other stays, etc., are made of steel or iron for which no test certificates are produced, the working pressure as found from the formulæ, in which S is to be taken at the lowest limit prescribed for the part, reduced by 15 per cent. shall, except where such material is specifically provided for in any formula, be the working pressure permitted. For flat plates of copper, the working pressure as found from the formulæ, reduced by 50 per cent. shall be the working pressure permitted.

6. Standard specifications for material.—Standard specifications for steel wrought iron and copper plates and bars, and for cast steel are prescribed in Chapter II but certificates of tests of material for wrought iron (except for special wrought iron for screw stays), copper and cast steel need not be produced unless special allowances are required. Such special allowances shall be in the discretion of the Chief Inspector.

7. Welded steel plates.—No steel plates subject to a direct tensile stress shall be welded, except where the weld is covered by a butt strap or straps or except where specifically permitted in the Standard Conditions.

8. Annealing after working in fire.—All steel plates which are welded, dished, flanged or locally heated shall be afterwards efficiently annealed.

9. Rivet holes.—All rivet holes must be drilled "fair" and as far as possible they should be drilled in place. After drilling the plates the burrs shall be removed, the faying surfaces of the plate cleaned and the sharp outer edges of the holes removed.

Note.—Where sizes of rivets are mentioned in the Standard Conditions the sizes refer to the diameters of the rivet holes, not to the diameters of the rivets used before closing.

10. End plates in steam space.—The end plates of large boilers, such as the Scotch type of marine boiler, in the steam space in way of uptakes shall be shielded from contact with the hot gases.

11. Hydraulic tests of new boilers.—In all new boilers working at pressures up to 100 lbs. per square inch the hydraulic test shall be twice the working pressure. For boilers working at pressures greater than 100 lbs. per square inch the hydraulic test pressure shall be 1½ times the working pressure plus 50 lbs. per square inch.

CHAPTER II.

Materials of Construction.

STEEL PLATES, RIVETS AND BARS.

(Based on British Standards.)

12. Process of manufacture.—Structural steel for boilers shall be made by the Open Hearth process, acid or basic.

13. Freedom from defects.—The finished material shall be free from cracks, surface flaws, and lamination. It shall also have a workmanlike finish, and must not have been hammer dressed.

14. Testing and inspecting.—The following tests and inspections shall be made at the place of manufacture prior to despatch; but, in the event of any of the material proving unsatisfactory in the course of being worked into boilers, such material shall be rejected, notwithstanding any previous certificate of satisfactory testing, and such further tests of the material from the same charge shall be made as the Inspector in attendance may consider desirable.

15. (a) Tensile test pieces.—The tensile strength and ductility shall be determined from Standard test pieces cut lengthwise or crosswise from the rolled material. When material is annealed or otherwise treated before despatch, the test pieces shall be similarly and simultaneously treated with the material before testing.

(b) (i) Plates.—Wherever practicable the rolled surfaces shall be retained on two opposite sides of the test piece. The elongation shall be measured on a Standard test piece having a gauge length of 8 inches.

(ii) For material more than ⅞ inch in thickness the width of the test piece between the gauge points shall not exceed 1½ inches; for material ⅞ inch to ⅝ inch in thickness inclusive, the width shall not exceed 2 inches ; for material less than $\frac{5}{8}$ inch in thickness the width shall not be more than $2\frac{1}{2}$ inches. In other respects the test pieces shall conform generally to the Standard Test Piece A of the British Engineering Standards Committee.

(c) (i) Round bars.—Bars may be tested full size as rolled, or they may be turned down to a convenient size, and if tested 1 inch in diameter or under, the test piece shall have a gauge length of 8 times the diameter. When enlarged ends are used, the length of the parallel portion shall be 9 times the reduced diameter (Standard Test Piece B of the British Engineering Standards Committee). The sectional area of the test piece shall be not less than $\frac{1}{4}$ square inch. Where bars are above 1 inch in diameter, and are tested full size as rolled, or have been turned down and the resulting test piece is above 1 inch in diameter, a gauge length of 4 times the diameter may be used if preferred by the Manufacturer, in which case an increased elongation will be required, as specified in Regulation 17. When enlarged ends are used, the length of the parallel portion shall be not less than $4\frac{1}{2}$ times the reduced diameter (Standard Test Piece F of the British Engineering Standards Committee).

(c) (ii) Any straightening of test pieces which may be required shall be done cold.

16. Mechanical tests, and selection of test pieces.—Plates and bars for boilers shall comply with the following mechanical tests. All test pieces shall be selected by the Inspecting Officer and tested in his presence, and he shall satisfy himself that the conditions herein described are fulfilled.

17. Tensile tests.—(a) Plates.—The tensile breaking strength of steel plates for shells, gusset stays and girders, determined from Standard Test Pieces, shall be between the limits of 26 and 32 tons per square inch, but a range of not more than 4 tons per square inch shall be permitted in any one case. For plates intended for flanging or welding, and for combustion chambers and furnaces, the tensile breaking strength shall be between the limits of 24 tons and 30 tons per square inch. The elongation, measured on a standard test piece having a gauge length of 8 inches, shall be not less than 20 per cent. for material of $\frac{5}{8}$ inch in thickness and upwards required to have a tensile breaking strength between the limits of 26 tons and 32 tons per square inch ; and not less than 23 per cent. for material of $\frac{5}{8}$ inch in thickness and upwards required to have a tensile breaking strength between the limits of 24 tons and 30 tons per square inch.

(b) Stay bars.—(i) The tensile breaking strength of longitudinal stays shall be between the limits of 26 tons and 32 tons per square inch, with an elongation of not less than 20 per cent. measured on the Standard Test Piece B, but a range of not more than 4 tons per square inch shall be permitted in any one case. For steel bars for fire-box and combustion chamber stays the tensile breaking strength shall be between the limits of 24 tons and 30 tons per square inch, with an elongation of not less than 23 per cent. measured on the Standard Test Piece B.

(ii) Where Stay Bars are tested on a gauge length of 4 times the diameter (Test Piece F) the elongation shall be 24 per cent. and 28 per cent. respectively.

(iii) The tensile breaking strength of angle and tee bars shall be between the limits of 26 and 32 tons per square inch, with an elongation of not less than 20 per cent. measured on the Standard Test Piece A.

(iv) For material under $\frac{5}{8}$ inch in thickness the elongation may be 3 per cent., but not more than 3 per cent. below the above-named elongations.

(v) Wherever practicable the rolled surfaces shall be retained on two opposite sides of the test piece.

(c) Rivet bars.—The tensile breaking strength of rivet bars shall be between the limits of 24 tons and 28 tons per square inch of section, with an elongation of not less than 25 per cent. measured on the Standard Test Piece B or 30 per cent. measured on the Standard Test Piece F. The bars may be tested the full size as rolled.

18. Number of tensile tests.—(a) Plates.—One tensile test shall be taken from each plate as rolled. For plates exceeding $2\frac{1}{2}$ tons in weight one tensile test shall be taken from each end.

(b) Angle, tee, rivet and stay bars.—(i) One tensile test shall be made from each 15 or part of 15 bars rolled of each section or diameter from the same charge, but not less than two tensile tests shall be made unless the total number of bars rolled from the same charge is 8 or less than 8 and the bars are of the same section or diameter, in which case one tensile test shall suffice. For round bars of $1\frac{1}{4}$ inches diameter and under, the numbers 50 and 20 shall be substituted for 15 and 8 respectively for determining the number of tests required.

(ii) Should a tensile test piece break outside the middle half of its gauge length, the test may, at the maker's option, be discarded and another test be made of the same plate or bar.

19. Bend Tests.—(a) Cold Bends.—Test pieces shall be sheared lengthwise or crosswise from plates or bars, and shall not be less than $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches wide, but for small bars the whole section may be used. For rivet bars bend tests are not required.

(b) Temper Bends.—(i) The test pieces shall be similar to those used for cold bend tests. For temper bend tests the samples shall be heated to a blood-red colour and quenched in water at a temperature not exceeding 80 degrees Fahr. The colour shall be judged indoors in the shade.

(ii) In all cold bend tests, and in temper bend tests on samples 0·5 inch in thickness and above, the rough edge or arris caused by shearing may be removed by filing or grinding, and samples 1 inch in thickness and above may have the edges machined, but the test pieces shall receive no other preparation. The test pieces shall not be annealed unless the material from which they are cut is similarly annealed, in which case the test pieces shall be similarly and simultaneously treated with the material before testing.

(c) For both cold and temper bends the test piece shall withstand, without fracture, being doubled over until the internal radius is equal to 1½ times the thickness of the test piece and the sides are parallel.

(d) For small sectional material these bend tests may be made from the flattened bar.

(e) Bend tests may be made either by pressure or by blows.

20. Number of Bend Tests.—(a) Plates.—A bend test shall be taken from each plate as rolled. For plates exceeding 2½ tons in weight one bend test shall be taken from each end. The bend tests from shell plates, butt straps and other plates which have not to be flanged or worked in the fire or which when in use are not to be exposed to flame shall be cold bend tests. The bend tests from plates which have to be flanged or worked in the fire or which when in use will be exposed to flame shall be temper bend tests.

(b) Angle Bars.—A cold or a temper bend test shall be made from each angle bar rolled.

(c) Stay Bars.—A cold and a temper bend test shall be made from every 15 stay bars as rolled from each charge.

21. Tests for manufactured rivets.—Rivets selected by the Inspecting Officer from the bulk shall withstand the following tests :—

(a) The rivet shanks shall be bent cold, and hammered until two parts of the shank touch, without fracture on the outside of the bend.

(b) The rivet heads shall be flattened, while hot, in the usual manner, without cracking at the edges. The heads shall be flattened until their diameter is 2½ times the diameter of the shank.

22. Additional Tests before rejection.—Should the test pieces first selected by the Inspector or Inspecting Officer not fulfil the test requirements, two further tests of the same kind may be made, but should either of these fail, the plates or bars from which test pieces were cut shall be rejected. In all such cases further tests shall be made before any material from the same charge can be accepted.

23. Branding.—Every plate and bar shall be clearly and distinctly marked by the maker in two places with an approved quality brand indicating that the material has complied with the required tests ; and also with the number or identification marks by which they can be traced to the charge from which the material was made.

24. Defacing of rejected material.—In the event of the material failing in any case to withstand the prescribed tests, the Inspector or Inspecting Officer shall see that the quality brand stamped on the material has been defaced by punch marks extending beyond the brand in the form of a cross, denoting that the material has been rejected.

25. Facilities for Inspection.—The maker shall adopt a system of marking the ingots, billets, slabs, plates, bars, etc., which will enable all finished material to be traced to the original charge, and the Inspector or Inspecting Officer must be given every facility for tracing all plates and bars to their respective charges, and for witnessing the required tests. When he is satisfied with the material and with the results of the tests, he shall be furnished with two copies of the advice notes of the material for his signature.

26. Steel not produced where rolled.—Where steel is not produced in the works at which it is rolled, a certificate in form IV shall be supplied to the Inspecting Officer deputed to witness the testing of the material, stating the Open Hearth Process by which it was made, the name of the Steel Maker who supplied it, also the numbers of the charges for reference to the books of the Steel Maker. The number of the charge shall be marked on each plate or bar for the purpose of identification.

27. Maker's certificate.—Before the mill sheets are signed, the maker shall furnish the Inspecting Officer with a certificate in Form IV guaranteeing that the material has been made by the Open Hearth Process acid or basic and that it has been subjected to, and has withstood satisfactorily, the tests above described in the presence of the Inspecting Officer. The following form of certificate will be accepted if printed on each mill sheet with the name of the firm, and initialled by the Test House Manager :—

'We hereby certify that the material described below has been made by the Open Hearth Process, $\frac{\text{acid}}{\text{basic}}$, and has been satisfactorily tested in the presence of $\frac{\text{the Inspecting Officer}}{\text{our Test House Manager}}$ in accordance with the Standard tests.'

IRON PLATES, RIVETS AND BARS.

28. Specification and Tests.—Wrought iron plates, stay and rivet bars shall comply with the British Standard Specification for Wrought Iron, Report No. 51. (Revised August, 1913).

The tensile and elongation tests are as follows :—

29. Plates.—The tensile breaking strength shall be between 20 and 24 tons with the grain, with elongations of not less than 12 per cent. for plates up to $\frac{5}{8}$ inch thick and 10 per cent. for plates over $\frac{5}{8}$ inch thick. The tensile breaking strength of the plates across the grain shall be between 17 and 21 tons with an elongation of not less than 4 per cent. measured on the Standard Test Piece A.

30. Rivet Bars.—The tensile breaking strength shall be between 21 and 25 tons with an elongation of not less than 25 per cent. measured on the Standard Test Piece B (as rolled) or 30 per cent. measured on the Standard Test Piece F (as rolled).

31. Tests for manufactured rivets.—To be the same as for steel. (See Regulation 21).

32. Stay Bars.—The tensile breaking strength shall be between 21 and 25 tons with an elongation of not less than 22 per cent. measured on the Standard Test Piece B (as rolled) or 27 per cent. measured on the Standard Piece F (as rolled).

33. Special Iron for Screw Stays for Fireboxes and Combustion Chambers.—In order that iron screw stays may be approved of the same size as would be required for mild steel, the iron must withstand the following tests :—

(i) Tensile Tests.—The tensile breaking strength shall not be less than 21½ tons per square inch, with an elongation of not less than 25 per cent. measured on the Standard Test Piece B or 30 per cent. measured on the Standard Test Piece F.

(ii) Bend Tests.—Test pieces either of the bar as rolled, or turned down to 1 inch diameter, shall stand bending cold until the sides are parallel and the space between the two sides is not greater than the diameter of the test piece.

(iii) Number of Tensile Tests.—The bars as rolled shall be placed in batches of twenty, and one tensile test shall be taken from each batch. If this is unsatisfactory, two other bars shall be selected for test, but should either of these fail the batch shall be rejected.

(iv) Number of Bend Tests.—One ordinary bend test shall be taken from each batch, and a similar test piece from each batch shall be lightly and evenly nicked on one side with a sharp cutting tool and bent back at this point through an angle of 180 degrees by pressure or by a succession of light blows. The fracture must be clean, fibrous, free from slag or dirt or any coarse crystalline structure. If either of these is unsatisfactory, two other bars shall be selected for test, but should either of these fail the batch shall be rejected.

(v) In all cases the selection of the test pieces shall be made by the Inspecting Officers.

COPPER PLATES, STAY AND RIVET BARS.

34. Tensile Tests.—(a) Plates.—The tensile breaking strength of copper plates for fire-boxes determined from Standard test pieces shall not be less than 14 tons per square inch with an elongation of not less than 35 per cent.

(b) Stay and Rivet Bars.—The tensile breaking strength of copper stay and rivet bars for fire-boxes shall not be less than 14 tons per square inch of section with an elongation of not less than 40 per cent. measured on the Standard Test Piece B.

35. Bend Tests.—Plates.—For either cold or red hot tests the test piece shall with stand being doubled over without fracture until the sides are touching and parallel.

36. Hammer Tests for Rods.—A piece of rod or bar 1 inch in length shall withstand, without cracking at the edges, being hammered endwise until the length is reduced to $\frac{1}{2}$ inch.

CAST STEEL.

37. Steel Castings.—Steel for castings may be made by any reliable process, acid or basic. All such castings shall be thoroughly annealed at a uniform temperature and be allowed to cool down prior to removal from the annealing furnace. If subsequently heated with the Inspector's approval, they shall again be similarly annealed if required by the Inspector.

38. Tensile and Bend Tests.—The tensile, elongation and bend tests for cast steel are as specified below. If full allowance for steel castings for fire-box or combustion chamber roof girders is required, they shall be tested as follows.

39. Number of Tests.—At least one tensile and one bend test shall be made from the casting from each charge, and when more than one casting is made from one charge, at least one tensile and one bend test shall be made from the castings run from one common pouring head; but separate tests shall be made from each casting or set of castings run from each separate pouring head.

Test pieces shall not be cut off until they have been stamped by the Inspecting Officer after the annealing has been completed.

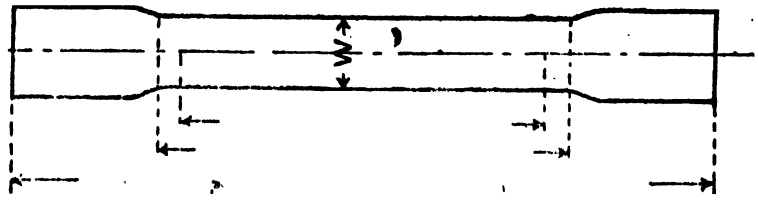
40. Tensile Tests.—The tensile breaking strength of steel castings shall be between the limits of 26 and 40 tons per square inch, with an elongation of not less than 15 per cent. measured on the Standard Test piece C, D or E (see Forms of British Standard Tensile Test Pieces).

41. Bend Tests.—Cold bend tests shall be made upon test pieces having a rectangular section of 1 inch wide by $\frac{3}{4}$ inch thick. The test pieces shall be machined and the edges rounded to a radius of $\frac{1}{16}$th inch. The test pieces shall be bent over the thinner section.

Bend tests may be made by pressure or by blows.

The test pieces shall withstand, without fracture, being bent through an angle of 60 degrees if the tensile breaking strength is between 35 and 40 tons per square inch, and in the case of other castings through an angle of 90 degrees, the internal radius of the bend being not greater than 1 inch.

42. If full allowance for steel castings is not required, only bend tests as above shall be taken.



43. No tests shall be made from unimportant steel castings or from steel castings which are used for articles usually made of cast iron, if the scantlings are not materially reduced below what would be required if cast iron were used.

CHAPTER III.

Rules for determining the working pressure to be allowed on various parts of boilers.

44. The maximum pressure at which a boiler may be used shall be determined in accordance with the provisions of this Chapter.

CYLINDRICAL SHELLS.

45. Formula for working pressure of shell.—For cylindrical shells, barrels, steam and water drums, and domes of boilers the maximum working pressure per square inch to be allowed shall be calculated from the following formula :—

(a) Where parts of drums of water tube boilers are perforated for tubes, the working pressure should be calculated by equation 55 under 'Tube Plates.'

$$W.P. = \frac{(t-2) \times S \times J}{C \times D} \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \text{Eqn. (1)}$$

W. P. is the working pressure in lbs. per square inch, t is the thickness of shell plates in 32nds of an inch,

S is the minimum tensile breaking strength of the shell plates in tons per square inch, or whatever strength is allowed under clause 2 of section 1,

J is the percentage of strength of the longitudinal seams of shell or of a line of holes in the shell for stays, or rivets, or of an opening in the shell not fully compensated, whichever is least calculated by the methods hereafter described.

C is a co-efficient as follows :—

2·75 when the longitudinal seams are made with double butt straps and when small shells are formed from solid rolled sections ;

2·83 when the longitudinal seams are made with lap joints and are treble riveted ;

2·9 when the longitudinal seams are made with lap joints and are double riveted ;

3·0 when the longitudinal seams are welded and are fitted with a single butt strap ;

3·3 when longitudinal seams are made with lap joints and are single riveted ;

D is the inside diameter of the outer strake of plating of the cylindrical shell measured in inches.

The Factor of Safety must be in no case less than 4.

The actual Factor of Safety in each case may be found from the equation :—

$F = 1{\cdot}4 \times C \times \frac{t}{t-2}$ with the best form of joint and least co-efficient (C) the Factor of Safety for shell plates, ½ inch to 1½ inches in thickness, varies from 5·13 to 3·99.

An addition of 10 per cent. shall be made to the appropriate co-efficient for shells of boilers in which the longitudinal seams are lap jointed and are not accessible to close visual inspection and for shell plates of externally fired boilers exposed to the direct impact of furnace flame ; provided that this addition shall not apply to the steam and water drums of water tube boilers where the drums are not close to the fire-grate and there are tubes between the fire-grate and the drum.

(b) The above co-efficients are standard and shall be used only for boilers open to inspection by an Inspecting Officer during the whole period of construction and which are certified by him as having been constructed in accordance with the Standard Conditions laid down in these rules.

46. Boiler shells not in accordance with standard conditions.—When the standard conditions are not complied with, additions to the appropriate co-efficient as defined in the preceding regulation, shall be made as follows :—

(a) 15 per cent. of the standard co-efficient when there are no proofs of tests of steel.

(b) 10 per cent. of the standard co-efficient when a boiler has not been inspected during construction by an Inspecting Officer and certified by him.

(c) Such percentage of the standard co-efficient when the workmanship is in any way doubtful and the Inspector is not satisfied that any of the foregoing additions to the co-efficient would be sufficient to meet the circumstances as the Chief Inspector deems fit.

47 .Cylindrical Shells.—(a) Shell plates shall not be less than ¼ inch in thickness.

(b) Cylindrical shells shall be as truly cylindrical as practicable.

(c) Welded end, or other circumferential seams, shall not be accepted, but in small wagon boilers and the like the fire-hole mouthpiece may be welded to the shell.

48. Position of Longitudinal Seams.—Each ring of plate forming the shell, barrel or drum shall, where practicable, be one piece and have its longitudinal seam well out of line with those of the adjoining rings. In Lancashire, Cornish, and other types of boilers, where parts of the shell are exposed to flame, the longitudinal seams shall be in the steam space, arranged alternately on each side of the crown and clear of the brick work.

49. Riveting of End Seams.—The riveting of the seams joining the end plates to the cylindrical shell shall be not less in strength than the 38 per cent. of the solid plate.

50. Other Circumferential Seams.—The circumferential seams joining the rings of shell plates shall have strength of joint not less than 50 per cent. of that of the longitudinal seam, but never less than that required of the end seams.

51. Welded Shell Plates.—Welded longitudinal seams in boiler shells shall not be passed, unless the weld is covered by a butt strap or straps securely riveted to the shell. For small steam domes where the welding is done by hammer and the plates do not exceed ½ inch in thickness the straps may be omitted. The strength of the weld shall be assumed to be 50 per cent. of that of the solid plate. The thickness of a single strap or combined thickness of double straps shall not be less than the thickness of the shell plate.

52. Butt Ends of Shell Rings.—The ends of shell plate rings where butted shall be given the same curvature as the rest of the ring. The setting shall not be done by hammering.

53. Butt straps.—Butt straps shall be cut from plates and not from rolled strip. They shall be bent in the rolls or pressed to the required curve. Thinning of the ends of butt straps which tuck under the shell rings shall be done by machine and not by heating and hammering.

54. Methods of calculating the strength of riveted joints.—(i) The percentage of strength of a riveted joint (J) shall be found from the following formulæ (a), (b), (c): (a) and (b) are applicable to any ordinary type of joint; (c) is applicable only to that type of joint in which the number of rivets in the inner rows is double that of the outer row. The lowest value given by the application of these formulæ is to be taken as the percentage of strength of the joint compared with solid plate.

(b) $\frac{100 \times A \times N \times C \times S_1}{P \times T \times S}$ = Rivet percentage ... Eqn. (3)

(c) $\frac{100\,(P - 2\,D)}{P} + \frac{100 \times A \times C \times S_1}{P \times T \times S}$ = Combined plate and rivet percentage ... ... Eqn. (4)

P is the pitch of rivets at outer row in inches,

D is the diameter of rivet holes in inches,

A is the sectional area of one rivet hole in square inches,

N is the number of rivets per pitch, (P),

T is the thickness of plate in inches,

C =1 for rivets in single shear as in lap joints, and 1·875 for rivets in double shear as in double butt strapped joints,

S_1 is the shearing strength of rivets, which is taken generally to be 23 tons per square inch for steel and 18 tons per square inch for iron, and may, in each case, be 85 per cent. of the minimum tensile breaking strength of the rivet bars,

S is the minimum tensile breaking strength of shell plates in tons per square inch or whatever strength is allowed under Regulation 5 of Chapter I.

In the first formula (a) D is the diameter of the rivet holes in the outer rows and in the third formula D is the diameter of the rivet holes in the next rows. In the last formula A is the area of one rivet hole in the outer row.

(ii) When the sectional area of the rivet holes is not the same in all rows, and when some of the rivets are in double shear and others in single shear, the rivet sections per pitch of each size or shear shall be computed separately and added together to form the total rivet section.

55. When Pitch exceeds maximum allowed.—Should the pitch of the rivets exceed the maximum pitch allowed, the permissible pitch shall be used in place of the actual pitch in determining the percentage of plate section, and in such circumstances no greater percentage than 85 shall be allowed for any type of joint.

56. Butt Straps and spacing of rivets below requirements.—Should the spacing of the rows of rivets or the distance between edge of plate and rivet hole, or the thickness of butt straps be less than is specified in the following regulations, the percentage representing the strength of joint should be modified as prescribed in those regulations.

57. Percentage of Welded and Strapped Seams.—In determining the percentage of strength of a welded seam covered by a strap or straps the formulæ and allowances in Regulations 54, 55 and 56 shall be applied, but 50 per cent. shall be added to the rivet percentage for the weld.

58. Percentage to be allowed for Solid Rolled Shells.—When small shells are rolled from the solid, J in equation (1) shall be taken as 95 per cent.

59. Thickness of Butt Straps.—The minimum thickness of butt straps for the longitudinal seams of cylindrical shells shall be determined by the following formulæ, but all straps should be of sufficient thickness to permit of efficient caulking, and in any case shall not be less than $\frac{1}{2}$ inch in thickness.

Single butt straps having ordinary riveting :—

$$1{\cdot}125\ T = T_1 \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \text{Eqn. (5)}$$

Single butt straps having every alternate rivet in the outter rows omitted :—

$$1{\cdot}125\ T \times \frac{(P-D)}{(P-2\ D)} = T_1 \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \text{Eqn. (6)}$$

Double butt straps of equal width having ordinary riveting :—

$${\cdot}625\ T = T_1 \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \text{Eqn. (7)}$$

$${\cdot}625\ T \times \frac{(P-D)}{(P-2\ D)} = T_1 \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \text{Eqn. (8)}$$

Double butt straps of unequal width having ordinary riveting :—

$${\cdot}75\ T = T_1 \text{ (wide strap)} \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \text{Eqn. (9)}$$

$${\cdot}625\ T = T_1 \text{ (narrow strap)} \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \text{Eqn. (10)}$$

Double butt straps of unequal width having every alternate rivet in the outer rows omitted :—

$${\cdot}75\ T \times \frac{(P-D)}{(P-2D)} = T_1 \text{ (wide strap)} \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \text{Eqn. (11)}$$

$${\cdot}625\ T \times \frac{(P-D)}{(P-2D)} = T_1 \text{ (narrow strap)} \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \text{(Eqn. 12)}$$

T_1 is the thickness of the butt straps in inches. The other symbols have the same significance as in Regulation 54.

t is the thickness of the flat plate in 32nds of an inch, t_1 is the thickness of the washers, strips or doublings employed in 32nds of an inch.

(e) Where the plates are exposed to the direct impact of flame, the co-efficient C shall be reduced 12½ per cent.

70. Plates supported by gusset stays.—(a) For the end plates of Lancashire, Cornish, Vertical and Locotype boilers, and other flat surfaces supported by irregularly pitched gusset stays, the maximum working pressure shall be :—

$$W.\ P. = \frac{C(t-1)^2}{D^2} \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \text{ Eqn. (32).}$$

C=88 for plates exposed to flame.

(b) Where such plates are stiffened by suitable tee or angle bars securely riveted to the plates within the circle D, the appropriate co-efficient may be increased thirty per cent. Such stiffening bars should be placed so as to transmit their load in a direct manner to the gusset stays or shell plate.

$$W.P. = \frac{C}{D^2}[(t-1)^2 + (t_1-1)^2] \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \text{ Eqn. (33)}$$

C=70 where only a flat steel compensating ring is fitted,

C is to be taken as the mean of the points of support through which circle passes in accordance with Regulation 67 where there is no mouthpiece or flat ring and the end plate is flanged around the manhole to the depth required in Regulation 71.

71. Flanged manholes and mudholes in the flat plates.—Where a flat plate is flanged to stiffen it at a manhole or sight hole, to permit the same working pressure as would be allowed upon an unpierced plate, the depth of the flange measured from the outer surface shall be at least equal to—where T is the thickness of the plate in inches, and W is the minor axis of the hole in inches.

72. Flat crown plates of vertical boilers.—For the flat crown plates of vertical boilers either with or without bolt stays, equation (32) shall be used in determining the working pressure with C=80, when the plates are not exposed to flame, and 70, when then are exposed to flame. In this case D is the diameter of the largest circle that can be drawy passing through the centres of the rivets or bolt stays when fitted, or the commencement of the curvature of the flanging, whichever is applicable. Where bolt stays are fitted with washers of the same thickness as the plate securely riverted thereto, the circle shall pass through the centres of the washer rivets, but where the washers are not riveted or where none are fitted the circle shall pass through the centres of the stays. Where the crown plate is flanged the inside radius of curvature at the flange shall not be less than 4 times the thickness of the end plate.

73. Circular flat ends of drums, etc., supported only at edges.—For these ends C in equation (32) shall be taken as 140 when the plates are not exposed to flame, and 122·5 when they are exposed to flame. In this case the circle D of largest diameter shall pass through the centres of rivets or bolts securing the end to the shell or, where the end is flanged, through the commencement of curvature.

Where flanged the inside radius of curvature at the flange shall not be less than 4 times the thickness of the end plate.

74. Bar or bulb stiffened end plates and smokebox tube plates of locotype boilers.—Where such plates instead of being supported by stays are stiffened in the steam space by substantial tee or angle bars securely riveted to the plate and extending across the plate to within the margin allowed by equation (35), or where such plates are formed with a deep bulb extending across the plate to well within margin allowed, for the support thus given,

C shall be taken as equal to 80 and 70 for plates not exposed, and exposed, to flame respectively. The margin or pitch for such stiffening shall be measured from the centre line of rivets or commencement of curvature of bulb providing it is not more than 2 inches from the centre line of bulb.

For the flat plate above the stiffener or bulb, C shall be taken as the mean of the values appropriate for the points of support.

75. Flat plate margins.—The amount of support in relief of stays which may be credited to the sides of shells, furnaces, uptakes, fireholes and foundation rings, etc., to which flat plates are attached shall not exceed that found by the following formula :—

Where the plates are flanged the margin shall be measured from the commencement of curvature or from a line $2\frac{1}{2}$ times the thickness of the plate distant from the side of the flange next the inner radius of corner, whichever is less. In other cases the margin shall be measured from the centre line of rivets in the nearest row of the seam by which the flat plate is attached.

STAYS.

76. Solid screwed stays.—For screw stays to combustion chambers and fireboxes and for longitudinal and cross stays, the maximum working pressure for the stays is to be calculated from the appropriate one of the following two formulæ :—

$$W.P. = \frac{C \times D_1^2}{A} \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \text{ Eqn. (37)}$$

W.P. is the working pressure in lbs. per square inch,

D is the diameter of stay over threads in inches,

D_1 is the diameter of body of stay at its smallest part in inches,

N is the number of threads of stay per inch,

is the area in square inches supported by one stay,

C=7100 for steel or special wrought iron screw stays to combustion chambers or fireboxes,

C=4700 for copper screw stays to fireboxes.

Where stays are made with enlarged ends and the body of the stay is smaller in diameter than at the bottom of the thread the working pressure shall be calculated from the second formula.

77. Screw stays in water spaces.—Where the stays are not fitted with nuts, the ends shall be riveted over to form good substantial heads.

78. Longitudinal stays.—Longitudinal and similar solid screwed stays shall be efficiently secured with nuts at each end and not merely riveted over. Where they are over 12 feet in length, they shall be supported at or near the middle of their length.

79. Jointed stays.—Where jointed longitudinal stays are fitted, they shall, where practicable, be fitted with pins having an effective sectional area 25 per cent. in excess of that of the stay. If the pins are slack in the holes, the total slackness shall not be more than 1-16 inch. The pins shall be as close as possible to the shoulder of the eye forging. The shoulder of the forging shall be at least $\frac{1}{2}$ inch wide all round, i.e., the diameter at the shoulder must be not less than the diameter of the hole plus 1 inch.

80. Diagonal bar or rod stays.—The sectional area of a diagonal rod or bar stay shall bear the same proportion to that of a direct stay as the length of the diagonal stay bears to the length of the perpendicular line from the end of the diagonal stay to the surface supported. The ends of diagonal stays shall not be bent, but shall be attached to the plate with bevelled washers and nuts or with riveted tee blocks or angles and shackle pins (see Regulation 79 for eyes and pins).

81. Stresses in steel jointed stays.—(a) The section of least strength whether of stay, rivets, shackle or pin shall be used in calculating the working pressure for the stay. For parts in tension a stress of 9000 lbs. per square inch of net section shall be allowed, and for parts in shear a stress of 8000 lbs. per square inch of net section.

(b) Parts in double shear shall be allowed a section of $1\frac{1}{4}$ times the single section.

82. Forged stays.—(a) No steel stays shall be welded. If plus threads are desired the ends of the stay bars may be upset or the bars may be drawn down in the middle portions from bars originally of the size of the ends.

(b) Iron stays may be welded but the stress allowed on a welded stay shall not exceed 5000 lbs. per square inch of net section.

(c) Stays which have been fireworked shall be annealed.

83. Stay nuts.—(a) Nuts to screw stays in combustion chambers and fireboxes shall not be less and need not be more than $\frac{7}{8}$ inch thick for stays up to $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches diamete over threads, $\frac{7}{8}$ inch thick for $1\frac{5}{8}$ and $1\frac{7}{8}$ inch stays, 1 inch thick for $1\frac{7}{8}$ and 2 inch stays and $1\frac{1}{8}$ inch thick for stays over 2-inch in diameter.

(b) The nuts for longitudinal stays shall be not less than the thickness laid down in the British Engineering Standards Association Specification appropriate to the diameters of the stays, the outside nut having the thickness therein prescribed for ordinary nuts, and the inside nut having the thickness provided for lock nuts.

(c) The nuts shall be made of solid mild steel or of iron which shall be without weld when exposed to flame.

84. Stay tubes.—For stay tubes, whether of wrought iron or of solid drawn or lap-welded steel, the maximum working pressure shall be calculated from the following formula :—

$$W.P. = \frac{5900}{A}\left[\left(D - \frac{1{\cdot}28}{N}\right)^2 - D_1{}^2\right] \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \text{Eqn. (38)}$$

D_1 is the internal diameter of the tube under the threads in inches, is the number of threads of stay per inch,

A is the area in square inches supported by one stay tube, measured from centre to centre from stay tubes. When the area contains tubes or parts of tubes their aggregate area, calculated from their smallest external diameter of body when in tension and smallest internal diameter when in compression, shall be deducted from the area of the containing figure and the remainder used as A in the formula.

85. Screw Threads of stay tubes.—Stay tubes shall be screwed at both ends with continuous threads, and the holes in the tube plates shall be tapped with continuous threads. The pitch of the threads shall not be finer than 11 threads per inch. The stay tubes shall be expanded by roller expanders and not made tight by caulking only.

86. Minimum thickness of stay tubes.—The minimum thickness of stay tubes in the body or at the ends under threads shall not be less than 5-32nds of an inch.

87. Thickened ends of stay tubes.—If stay tubes are required to have their thickness increased at the screwed ends so that the thickness at the bottom of thread is practically the same as in the body of the tube, the thickness shall be attained by upsetting and not by any welding process, and the tubes shall be annealed after the upsetting.

88. Stays in tension and compression.—(a) The same stress shall be allowed in compression as in tension. The strength of short stays in compression and not liable to bending may be calculated on the net section of the stay at bottom of thread or in body, whichever is less.

(b) The stress to be allowed on any stay or part of a stay not provided for in the foregoing shall be the same as that allowed for stays or parts of stays of approximately like kind in similar conditions.

89. Measurements of stayed areas in the end plates of Locotype and vertical boilers.—When the areas supported by stays are semi-circular as in the upper parts of end plates and smokebox tube plates of locotype boilers, or annular as in the crown plates of vertical type boilers A, the area to be supported by stays, shall, in the first case, be the area of the plate contained within the margins credited to casing or barrel sides, screw stays, fire door ring or tubes stays as the case may be, and in the second case be the area of the annulus between the margins credited to uptake and shell. When bolt staying is necessary, the stays shall be properly distributed ; the aggregate stay section shall then be used in the formula for calculating the working pressure.

90. Gusset stays.—Gusset stays shall be attached to end and shell plates by double angles, not less in thickness than the gusset plates with properly spaced and formed rivets. The maximum working pressure for the stay when of ordinary form shall be calculated by the following formula :—

$$W.P. = \frac{8500 \times C}{A} \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \text{Eqn. (39)}$$

C, the co-efficient, is the number representing the least of the following :—

(1) $N_1 \times A_1$.

(2) $N_2 \times A_2 \times 1{\cdot}75$.

(3) $N_3 \times A_3 \times 1{\cdot}75$.

(4) $N_4 \times A_4$.

(5) $(G - N_2 \times D_2) \times (t-2) \times {\cdot}037$.

(6) $(G_1 - D_3) \times (t-2) \times {\cdot}037$.

N_1, N_2, N_3 N_4, D_1, D_2, D_3, D_4, and A_1, A_2, A_3, A_4, are respectively the numbers, diameters and sectional areas of the rivets in the joints of each gusset stay, the order of the joints being (1), angles to end plate, (2), end plate angles to gusset, (3), shell angles to gusset, and (4), angles to shell,

G is the depth in inches of gusset plate measured through the line of rivets attaching it to the end plate angles,

G_1 is the depth in inches of gusset plate measured normal to the slant edge of plate through the rivet nearest to the end plate in the joint attaching gusset plate to shell angles, t is the thickness of the gusset plate in 32nds of an inch,

A is the area in inches of flat plate supported by the gusset stay which, in the case of Lancashire and Cornish boilers, should be determined as follows :—

(i) The margins allowed under flat plate rules for shell and furnace shall be marked on end plates and the lengths of the centre lines of gussets between them measured, also the distance between each pair of gusset lines from the middle of the smaller in a direction normal to the greater. If L and L_1 be the lengths of two adjacent gusset lines and if the distance between them be W, the area contained by the gusset lines and the shell and furnace margin lines may be apportioned between the stays thus :—

$\frac{W(3L \times L_1)}{8}$ = Portion of area in square inches apportioned to L line gusset ... ... Eqn. (40)

$\frac{W(3L_1 \times L)}{8}$ = Portion of area in square inches apportioned to L_1 line gusset ... ... Eqn. (41)

(ii) The portion of the area on the other side of each gusset line shall, except when of triangular form, be found in like manner and its amount added to that already found to form the total,

(iii) For the triangular portions in the wing spaces the area shall be taken as half the product of the length of gusset line into the perpendicular distance between it and the intersecting point where the marginal curves meet.

91. Bolts and Studs.—(a) Bolts and studs connecting parts of boilers such as shell, end plates, tube plates, furnaces, uptakes, externally fitted manhole covers, etc., may be made either of steel or good quality wrought iron. For bolts and studs of flanges connecting mountings to boilers see Regulation 137.

$$W.P. = \frac{N \times C}{A}\left(D - \frac{1{\cdot}28}{n}\right)^2 \quad \text{... ... ... Eqn. (42)}$$

D is the diameter of bolt or stud over threads in inches,

N is the number of bolts or studs securing the part,

n is the number of threads of screw per inch,

C = 4700 for steel bolts or studs where the diameter over threads is less than $\frac{7}{8}$ inch,

C = 5600 for steel bolts or studs where the diameter over threads is not less than $\frac{7}{8}$ and not greater than $\frac{7}{8}$ inch.

C = 7000 for steel bolts or studs where the diameter over threads is greater than $\frac{7}{8}$ inch.

When the material is iron, a reduction of 15 per cent. shall be made in the working pressure as calculated by the formula.

A is the area in square inches of the surface supported by the bolts or studs. For jointed flanges the area shall be taken to extend to midway between the pitch line of the bolts and the inner edge of the flange by which the part is secured.

FIREBOX AND COMBUSTION CHAMBER TOP SUPPORTS.

92. Girders supporting the tops of fireboxes and combustion chambers.—(a) For girders supporting the tops of fireboxes and combustion chambers the maximum working pressure shall be calculated from the appropriate one of the following two formulæ :—

(i) Solid or spilt girders of rectangular section supported at ends only :—

$$W.P. = \frac{C \times t \times D^2 \times S}{(L-P) \times D_1 \times L} \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \text{ Eqn. (43)}$$

$$W.P. = \frac{C_1 \times S}{(L-P) \times D_1 \times L} \times \frac{I}{Y} \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \text{ Eqn. (44)}$$

t is the thickness of the girder at centre when a forging or casting, or the sum of the thicknesses of the plates where the girder is made of two plates, measured in 32nds of an inch,

D is the least depth of the girder at or near the middle in inches,

L is the distance in inches between the end or side plates which support the girders measured in the direction of the girders,

P is the pitch of the stays supported by the girder in inches,

D_1 is the distance apart of the girders, centre to centre, in inches,

S is the minimum tengile breaking strength of the plates forming the girder in tons per square inch, or whatever is allowed for them,

I is the moment of inertia of section round neutral axis expressed in inches,

Y is the distance in inches of the farther edge of section from neutral axis,

$C = \frac{N}{N+1} \times 21$, where the number of stays in each girder is odd,

and $\frac{N+1}{N+1} \times 21$. where the number of stays in each girder is even, N being the number of stays to each girder,

$C_1 = \frac{N}{N+1} \times 4030$, where the number of stays in each girder is odd, and $\frac{N+1}{N+2} + 4030$, where the number of stays in each girder is even, N being the number of stays to each girder.

(b) Where the girders rest on end or side plates of fireboxes, etc., they shall be fitted and bedded directly to the edges and corners of the supporting plates.

(c) Where girders are supported in any other way than by the end or side plates of the firebox or combustion chamber, the calculations for determining the working pressure shall be made in accordance with the actual conditions of support.

In such cases the length of the strip of firebox or cumbustion chamber top plate to be supported by the girder shall, subject to the limit imposed on the distance of the nearest stay, be taken as equal to the product of the number of bolts carried by the girder into the pitch of the bolts. A maximum nominal stress of 14,000 lbs. per square inch or girder section shall be allowed for steel.

(d) Slings, links, pins, rivets and connections to shell of slung girders shall be sufficient to carry the whole load that would otherwise be carried by the girder, and each girder must be equally slung or supported.

(e) In the case of girders supported at the ends only by angle bars riveted to the casing crown, the length L may, when the girder extends over the full breadth of the angle face, be taken as the distance between the centres of the angle faces. When this distance does not exceed that of L in the formula, the pressure shall be determined in the ordinary way. The supporting angles and rivets shall be sufficient section for the intended purpose.

93. Design of girders generally.—In dealing with girders generally the following principles shall be observed :—

(a) each girder shall be of sufficient strength to support its share of the load on the roof plate independently of the roof plate ;

(b) the depth D and the thickness t to be used in calculation shall be respectively the effective depth and thickness at or near the middle of the length ; projections which do not add to the longitudinal strength shall be disregarded ;

(c) girders shall be properly attached to the roof plate by bolts or screws.

94. Spacing of end stays.—Allowance for curves, etc.—(a) For the tops of fireboxes and combustion chambers, the distance between the rows of stays nearest to the tube plate or firehole plate or back plate as the case may be, and the commencement of curvature of these plates at their flanges shall not be greater than in the flat plate Regulation.

(b) Where the tops are joined to the sides by curved portions, if the outer radius of the curved portion is less than half the allowable distance between the girders, the distance between the first girder and the inner surface of the side plate shall not exceed the allowable distance between the girders. If the radius of the curved portion is greater than half the allowable distance between the girders, the width of the flat portion measured from the centre of the girder shall not be more than half the allowable distance between the girders. The working pressure for the supporting bolts and for the plate between them shall be determined in the ordinary way.

95. Cambered firebox tops.—For Messrs. Marshall Sons and Company's patent stayless roof for fireboxes of locotype boilers made of steel in which the centre lines of the corrugations meet the centre lines of the end riveted seams at points not farther distant from the side plates than onehalf the inner radius of curvature of the corner by the roof and side plate, in order to ensure that the thickness and height of the pressed diagonal corrugations of the camber are satisfactory, the working pressure shall not exceed the smaller of the values obtained from the following formulæ :—

$$W.P. = \frac{25000\,(t-1) \times H^2}{W \times L \times \sqrt{W^2 + L^2}} \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \text{ Eqn. (45)}$$

$$W.P. = \frac{55\,(t-1)^2 \times (W + \sqrt{W^2 + L^2})^2}{W^2 \times L^2} \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \text{ Eqn. (46)}$$

t is the thickness of the roof plate in 32nds of an inch,

H is the height of the corrugation at its highest part measured perpendicularly on one side of the plate in inches,

L is the length of the roof plate between centre lines of rivets in inches.

96. Corrugated firebox tops.—For Messrs. Richard Garrett and Son's corrugated stayless roof of fireboxes of locotype boilers made of steel in which the side corrugations are parts of true circles and the radius of the middle corrugation is not more than about $\frac{1}{4}$th of the radius of the outer corrugations and the corrugations are cambered longitudinally, the working pressure shall not exceed the smaller of the values obtained from the following formulæ :—

$$W.P. = \frac{C}{R} \times \frac{(t-1)^2}{(L+24)} \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \text{ Eqn. (47)}$$

t is the thickness of the corrugated plate in 32nds of an inch,

TUBE PLATES.

97. Parts to be stayed.—(a) All flat tube plates, except those of locotype boilers and of other boilers in which the total gross area of surface occupied by tubes in any one plate, being the sum of one or more areas enclosed within lines touching the outsides of the outer rows of tubes, does not exceed 7 square feet, shall be stayed within the nests of tubes except as provided in Regulation 101.

(b) The parts of tube plates which lie outside the nests of tubes shall be stayed or supported wherever the size of the area of plate subject to steam pressure necessitate staying or support, either by marginal stay tubes or other means.

(c) Where stay tubes are required they shall be strong enough to support the load due to the steam pressure on the plate without taking account of any aid from the plain tubes contained in the areas.

(d) The stiffness of tube plates and pitch of stays within the nests of tubes where stay tubes are required and where marginal stay tubes are required in support of blank spaces adjacent to or between the nests shall be determined by flat plate rules under Regulation 69.

The requirements for stay tubes are specified in Regulations 84 to 88.

(e) Tube plates within the nests of tubes whether fitted with stay tubes or not shall comply with the requirements of Regulation 98 in regard to thickness and cross section between tubes.

C = 470 for tubes expanded into parallel holes in steel or iron tube plates, = 530 for tubes expanded into taper holes in steel or iron tube plates.

For copper tube plates or copper or brass tubes, the appropriate co-efficient should be reduced 20 per cent.

Where the thickness and cross section of the tube plates are less than the minimum prescribed in Regulation 98, the appropriate co-efficient shall be reduced in proportion to the deficit.

Where no stay tubes are fitted the tubes at the fire-box end shall be beaded over or bellmouthed.

(b) In the unstayed tube plates of loco-type boilers and in other tube plates in which stay tubes are not required the support afforded by the plain tubes shall not be taken to extend beyond the lines enclosing the outer edges of the tubes. Parts of flat plate outside this line shall either lie in the plate margin or be separately supported. No account need be taken of the stiffness of tube plate in the nests of tubes when the above conditions are fulfilled.

Ordinarily the requirements of this clause are applicable only to expanded smoke and water tubes in flat continuous tube plates containing more than one row of tubes. See Regulation 102 for attachment of tubes of water tube boilers.

100. Tube plates, other than ends of vertical boilers forming parts of outer shell.—(a) When vertical boilers have a nest or nests of horizontal tubes so that there is direct tension on the tube plates due to the vertical load on the boiler ends, or to their acting as horizontal ties across the shell, the thickness of the tube plates and the spacing of the tubes shall be such that the section of metal taking the load is sufficient to keep the stress within that allowed on the shell plates.

(b) Each alternate tube in the outer vertical rows of tubes shall be a stay tube. The tube plates between the stay tubes shall be in accordance with the rules for tube plates and in addition, considered as part of shell, the maximum working pressure,—

102. Attachment of tubes of water tube boilers.—(a) All tubes shall be carefully drifted or roller expanded in the holes in the tube plates. They shall project through the neck or bearing part in the holes by at least a quarter of an inch and be secured from drawing out by being bell mouthed at each end to the extent of 1-32nd inch for each inch in diameter plus 2-32nds inch.

(b) The tube holes in the tube plates of drums, pockets or headers shall be formed in such a way that the tubes can be effectively tightened in them. Where the tube ends are not normal to the tube plates, there shall be a neck or belt of parallel seating of at least ¼ inch in depth measured in a plane through the axis of the tube at the holes.

(c) The tubes shall be arranged so that there is sufficient accessibility for cleaning them both internally and externally.

103. Compression of tube plates.—(a) For fire-box or combustion chamber tube plates which are subject to compression due to the pressure on the roof plate the maximum working primer shall be :—

Provided that the above formula shall not apply in the case of fireboxes where the girders do not rest on the tube plates, or where the roof plate is stayed direct to the outer shell or to girders supported by the shell.

(b) Where girders rest on the side plates or the roof plate is so formed that the load is carried both by side and end plates, in no case shall the compressive stress on the plates exceed 14,000 lbs. per square inch for steel or 7,000 lbs. per square inch for copper.

The length for the same purpose shall be the distance from the centre of the row of rivets connecting the crown and the body of the furnace to the substantial support at the bottom of the furnace, or to a row of screwed stays connecting the furnace to the shell, provided that the pitch of stays at the furnace does not exceed 14 times the thickness of the furnace plate when the stays are riveted at their ends, or 16 times when the stays are fitted with nuts. 115. Means for Examination and Cleaning.—Wherever the size of the boiler permits, all such boilers shall have means for ingress whereby examination and cleaning of the inner surfaces of plates and tubes exposed to flame may be thoroughly effected. When boilers are too small to permit of this, and the construction is such that they cannot readily be taken apart, there shall be manholes and sightholes sufficiently large and numerous to permit of the inside being satisfactorily cleaned.

116. Manholes and Sightholes in Vertical Boilers.—Where large cross tubes are fitted there shall be a sighthole in the shell opposite at least one end of each tube sufficiently large to examine and clean it. The doors of these sightholes shall be in positions accessible for that purpose. In addition to the cross tube sightholes there shall be at least three mudholes round the base of the boiler.

117. Manholes, Mudholes and Sightholes in Locomotive Type Boilers.—Wherever the size of the boiler permits there shall be a manhole in the barrel. 119. Mudholes and Sightholes.—In all cases in which the covers are internally fitted, mudholes and sightholes shall be elliptical in shape.

120. Compensation Rings to Manholes.—(a) Compensation shall be provided in every case for the part cut out of a cylindrical shell for a manhole. The strength of the net section of compensating ring and of the rivets securing it to shell compared with that of the part of shell cut out shall not be less than the strength of the longitudinal seams.

The spacing of the rivets shall be such as not to reduce the strength of the shell plate below that of the longitudinal seams.

(b) The percentage of compensating section shall be determined by the following formulæ :—

$$\frac{200\ (W-D) \times Tr}{(L + 2D) \times Ts} = \text{percentage strength of compensating section} \quad \ldots \quad \text{Eqn. (67)}$$

$$\frac{80 \times A \times N}{(L + 2D) \times Ts} = \text{percentage strength of rivet section} \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \text{Eqn. (68)}$$

Parts of raised manhole mouthpieces within four inches of the shell may, in addition to the ring, be included in the compensating section.

120. Compensation for Cutting Large Holes in Shells.—Where holes are cut in cylindrical shells for mountings, the diameters of the holes being greater than 2 times the thickness of the shell plate plus 2½ inches, compensation shall be fitted as in the case of manholes. Where ordinary sized steel stand blocks or pad pieces are fitted and are securely riveted to the shell, no additional compensation for the hole cut in the shell is needed. If, however, the net section of the stand block or pad within four inches of the shell is less than the section of the shell plate cut away a compensation ring shall be fitted. Where a large opening is cut in a cylindrical shell to receive another part of the structure, the sides where cut away shall be efficiently cross stayed or strengthened in some other effective manner.

121. Manholes and Mudholes in Flat Plates.—Where a flat plate is flanged to stiffen it at a manhole or sighthole, to permit the same working pressure as would be allowed upon an unpierced plate, the depth of the flange measured from the outer surface is to be at least equal to—where T is the thickness of the plate in inches, and

W is the minor axis of the hole in inches.

122. Stand Blocks and Pads.—Stand blocks and pad pieces for carrying mountings shall be of cast steel, wrought iron or mild steel, either pressed or welded, and of substantial proportions. They shall be carefully bedded on the shell and the riveting shall be pitched to ensure a tight joint. The jointing faces to which the mountings are to be bolted shall be machined and be level when the boiler is in its working position.

123. Doors, Mouthpieces and Cross Bars.—(a) All internally fitted doors of manholes, mudholes and sightholes shall be of wrought iron or steel built up or pressed to shape and annealed, or made from one thickness of plate with a machined recess for the jointing material. Their spigot part or the recess shall not have a greater clearance than $\frac{1}{16}$th inch all round, i.e., the axes shall not be less than $\frac{1}{8}$th inch smaller than the holes in which they are fitted.

(b) The studs or bolts of large doors shall be screwed through the plates. In the case of small doors the studs may be forged solid with the doors or, if screwed, be efficiently riveted to the doors.

(c) Covers of raised circular manhole mouthpieces of Lancashire type boilers and others shall be of mild steel; whether dished or flat, the cover at its thinnest part shall not be of less thickness than that required by flat plate rules under Regulation 73 for the intended pressure. The bolts or studs securing the cover to the frame or mouthpiece shall also satisfy the bolt rule under Regulation 91.

(d) Manhole mouthpieces for cylindrical shells and end plates shall be made of steel or wrought iron either pressed out of the solid or welded. Circular manhole mouthpieces of Lancashire type boilers should not be less than 16 inches in internal diameter and ½ inch in thickness, and when welded the position of the weld shall be at right angles to the longitudinal line. Cross bars shall be of substantial proportions and either solid forgings of steel or iron or of cast steel.

Boiler Mountings and Fittings.

124. The Requisite Mountings and Fittings.—Every boiler shall be fitted with the following :—

Two safety valves;

Two independent means of indicating the water level;

A feed check valve;

An attachment for Inspector's test gauge;

A manhole, where the size and construction permit, and such mudholes or sightholes as are necessary for effectively cleaning the boiler.

125. Safety Valves.—(a) Safety valves shall not be less than 1 inch in diameter except in the case of every small boilers, for which valves of ½ inch diameter are permitted.

(b) The minimum aggregate area of safety valves of ordinary type in each boiler, whether coal fired or oil fired, and whether working under natural, forced or induced draught, shall be found by the following formula :—

$$A = H.S. \times \frac{C}{(W.P.+15)} \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \text{Eqn. (70)}$$

A is the aggregate area of safety valves in square inches,

H.S. is the total heating surface of the boiler in square feet,

(See Part II, Chapter 1, Regulation 151).

W. P. is the working pressure in lbs. per square inch,

C=1·25 for coal fired boilers and 1·5 for oil fired boilers other than water tube,

C=1·1 for coal fired water tube boilers and 1·25 for oil fired water tube boilers.

(c) All the safety valves of a boiler may be fitted in one chest, but such chest shall be separate from any other valve chest, and shall be connected direct to the boiler or stand block or pad by a strong and stiff neck, the passage through which should have a cross sectional area at least equal to one-half the aggregate area of the safety valves in the chest;

Provided that the safety valves of small locomotive type boilers with overhead engines may, on account of cramped space, be attached to the engine cylinder casting, provided there is a clear short passage way of ample sectional area and structional strength between the valves and the boiler.

(d) The openings in the boiler shell for safety valves shall be left clear and uncovered on the inside and shall not be connected to an internal pipe of any description.

(e) Each safety valve shall be capable of being lifted a distance at least equal to one-fourth of its effective diameter and there shall be a free outlet for the waste steam.

(f) Where a waste steam pipe is fitted, the pipe and the passages leading to it shall have a cross sectional area not less in square inches than the combined areas of the safety valves as given by sub-regulation (b) of this regulation.

(g) Each large enclosed safety valve chest shall have a means of draining it, and the drain pipe shall be led clear of the boiler.

(h) Means shall be provided in every case to prevent the valves being lifted out of their seats when working. Large valve seats shall be secured by studs and nuts.

(i) In the case of lever valves, if the holes in the lever are not bushed with brass, the pins shall be of brass; iron and iron working together shall not be permitted.

(j) The weight of a lever and weight safety valve shall be in one piece and be secured at the end of the lever against a change of position. In the case of spring loaded safety valves, washers or ferrules shall be fitted under the adjusting screws so that the valves cannot be overloaded when under steam.

(k) Safety valves shall be accessible and so arranged that they can be eased off their seats at any time. In the case of dead weight and spring loaded safety valves a substantial test lever for the purpose shall be provided.

(l) The size of the steel of which the springs of direct loaded safety valves are made shall be found by the following formula :—

$$\sqrt[3]{\frac{L \times D}{C}} = \text{thickness of wire in inches} \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \text{Eqn. (71)}$$

L is the load on the spring in pounds,

D is the diameter of the spring from centre to centre of wire in inches,

C=8,000 for round steel and 11,000 for square steel.

(m) The springs shall have a sufficient number of coils with a range of compression equal to at least one-half of the diameter of the valve. When loaded to the working pressure the amount of compression shall not be less than one quarter of the diameter of the valve.

126. Water gauges.—(a) Every boiler shall have two means of indicating the water level in it, and have marked on it, when applicable, in a contiguous position easily seen, the level of the highest part of the furnaces, fire-box or combustion chamber as the case may be.

(b) All large boilers shall be fitted with two glass water gauges. For small boilers where there is difficulty in fitting two glass water gauges, two test cocks may be fitted in place of the second class water gauge.

(c) The lowest visible part of the glass water gauge and lower test cock shall be fixed at a safe working level. For locomotive type and vertical boilers this shall not be less than 2 inches above the highest part of the fire-box roof plate.

(d) Glass water gauges shall be so placed as to be easily seen and reached by the boiler attendant. The fittings of glass water gauges and test cocks shall be of substantial make with large passage ways through them, and so constructed that an instrument can be passed through the opening. The gauge cocks when open shall have their handles in a vertical direction and each handle at its junction with the plug shall be plainly marked with a deep line to indicate the direction of the passage way through the plug. A drain cock and pipe must be fitted to each glass water gauge. A guard to prevent injury to the attendant and a pointer to show the ordinary working water level shall also be fitted to each glass water gauge.

127. Steam pressure gauge.—Each boiler shall have a separate steam pressure gauge placed where it can be easily seen. It shall be marked in pounds per square inch and shall have a range of not less than double the working pressure of the boiler. A red line shall mark the working pressure and a syphon pipe shall be fitted between the pressure gauge and the boiler.

128. Steam stop valve.—(a) A steam stop valve shall be fitted between the boiler and the steam pipe and, except in the case in which a super-heater forms an integral part of the boiler itself (e.g., in the Babcock and Wilcox water tube boiler) between the boiler and the super-heater. Where two or more boilers are connected with a steam receiver or any other vessel, a steam stop valve shall be fitted between the boiler and such receiver or vessel.

(b) Steam stop valve shall be attached direct to the boiler shell or to suitable pads or stand blocks riveted to the shell, and the neck of the valve chest shall be reasonably short and of strong construction ; Provided that in the case of a large boiler in which it is proposed, for the purpose of drainage or owing to obstruction, to connect the steam pipes to the steam stop valve at a higher level than would be obtained under this regulation, a vertical stand pipe not exceeding 5" diameters in height will be permitted between the stop valve and the boiler. Such stand pipes shall be of strong construction, and of wrought iron, mild steel or cast steel. The flanges of wrought iron or mild steel pipes shall be riveted to the pipes, and there shall be no branch on the stand pipe for any other connection.

Provided also that in the case of a large boiler in which it is desired to fit a tee piece for the purpose of providing a branch connection between the stop valve and the boiler, such a tee piece may be so fitted. The tee piece shall be of strong construction, of wrought iron, mild steel, or cast steel and not exceed 2½" diameters in height. A stop valve shall be fitted direct to each tee piece branch.

129. Feed check valves.—The feed check valve shall be attached direct to the boiler or to a suitable pad and be of combined non-return and shut-down type. The valve opening in boiler or end of internal feed pipe shall be above the low-water level and below the working level.

130. Blow-down cock or valve and pipes.—(a) The blow-down cock or valve shall be of substantial construction. The waste pipe attached to the cock or valve shall not be connected to a pipe common to another boiler. The pipe shall not be bound fast in earth or brickwork.

(b) (i) For locomotive type, vertical and marine type boilers the cock or valve shall be attached direct to the boiler or to a suitable pad or stand block. For water tube boilers the cock or valve shall be outside the brickwork with a substantial steel pipe between it and the mudbox.

(ii) For Cornish and Lancashire boilers the cock or valve may be attached to a cast steel elbow pipe of substantial section bolted to a suitable stand block riveted to the boiler. But cast iron elbow pipes shall not be permitted.

131. Inspector's pressure gauge attachment.—(a) Every boiler shall be fitted with a valve or cock carrying in a vertical position a receiving screw for the attachment of the Inspector's pressure gauge.

(b) Except when the valve or cock forms part of the pipe carrying the boiler pressure gauge, it shall be attached to the top of the shell near the pressure gauge.

(c) The receiving socket shall be tapped ½ inch British Standard Whitworth screw thread, and shall be fitted with an easily removable cap.

(d) In the case of small boilers which cannot be entered by an Inspector and which are hydraulically tested at each inspection a plug hole tapped ⅜ inch British Standard Whitworth screw thread shall be provided in a handy position for the attachment of the Inspectors' test pump hose nipple.

132. Manholes, mudholes and sightholes.—See Regulations 115 to 123.

133. Fusible plugs.—Plugs, where fitted, shall be over the hottest part of the furnace or firebox. The outside and inside of the plug shall be kept clean and the fusible metal shall be periodically renewed.

134. Design of boiler mountings.—All boiler-mounting valves over 2 inches diameter shall have outside screws, their covers shall be secured by bolts or studs, and all shall be arranged to be shut with a right hand motion of the wheels.

135. Material of valve chests.—Feed valve chests and all stop and safety valve chests when subjected to saturated steam only, for working pressures up to 160 lbs. per square inch, may be made of cast iron, but such valve chests when subjected to super-heated steam shall, whatever the working pressure, be of cast steel or other approved material.

136. Cocks and valves to be easily seen whether open or shut.—The construction of all important cocks and valves connected to the boiler shall be such as to show without difficulty whether they are open or shut.

137. Studs and bolts securing mountings.—(a) When boiler mountings are secured by studs, the studs shall have a full thread holding in the plate for a length of at least one diameter. If the stud holes penetrate the whole thickness of the plate, the stud shall be screwed right through the plate and be riveted or fitted with a nut inside the boiler wherever the construction of the boiler permits.

(b) Where boiler mountings are secured by bolts, the bolts shall be screwed right through the plate with their heads inside the boiler.

138. Bronze boiler mountings.—The chests of blow down cocks and valves, water gauge valves and cocks, and similar fittings, shall be made of good and suitable bronze. All cocks used with boilers working at 100 lbs. pressure or above shall be asbestos packed and of substantial design and make.

139. Chests and parts of mountings and fittings.—Subject to the limitations of Regulations 130, 135 and 138 the above mentioned chests and parts of mountings and fittings may be made of cast steel, cast iron, or bronze.

140. Cast steel chests, etc.—(a) Steel-castings, when machined and ready for fitting in place, shall be subjected to a hydraulic test equal to twice the working pressure which they may have to bear.

(b) Steel-castings which will be subject to the action of feed water shall be made of steel of which the manganese content does not exceed ·4 per cent.

141. Chests, etc. in general.—All chests and fittings shall be smooth, sound and free from flaws, cracks or other injurious defects. After completion they shall withstand satisfactorily a hydraulic test to at least twice the working pressure of the boiler for which they are intended.

The working pressure and thickness of the chests or pipes shall be determined by the following formulæ :—

$$t = \frac{\text{W. P.} \times D}{C} + X \qquad (73)$$

D is the internal diameter of the chest in inches,

t is the thickness of the chest in 32nds of an inch,

C is a co-efficient from the following table,

X is a provision for toleration, etc., from the following table.

TABLE OF VALUES OF C AND X.

$$\text{W. P.} = \frac{C\,(t-3)}{D} \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \text{Eqn. (74)}$$

t is the thickness of the pipe in 100ths of an inch,

C = 45 for brazed pipes.

(e) When copper pipes are bent they shall be made thicker to provide for thinning at the bend. In no case shall the radius of curvature at the centre line of the pipe be less than twice the external diameter of the pipe.

144. Wrought Iron and Steel Pipes.—(a) These pipes may be solid drawn, lap-welded or riveted.

(b) The process of welding the seams shall be by hammering or rolling the joint.

(c) On completion of any work which involves heating, whether for welding the joint, welding on flanges, hot bending the pipe, or for any other purpose, the pipe shall be carefully annealed.

(d) Mild steel for lap-welded steam pipes and tubes shall have a tensile breaking strength not exceeding 28 tons per square inch, with a minimum elongation of 25 per cent. on the standard test piece.

(e) All iron or steel steam pipes and tubes prior to being fitted in place shall be subjected to hydraulic test to at least 3 times the working pressure.

(f) The maximum working pressure allowed on pipes shall be determined by the following formulæ :—

(1) Solid drawn cold finished pipes (up to 28 tons tensile breaking strength).

$$\text{W. P.} = \frac{120\,(t-10)}{D} \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \text{Eqn. (75)}$$

(2) Solid drawn hot finished pipes (up to 28 tons tensile breaking strength).

$$\text{W. P.} = \frac{120\,(t-12)}{D} \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \text{Eqn. (76)}$$

(3) Welded pipes of iron or steel whether with or without covering strap.

(4) Pipes with riveted joints. (J being the strength of joint per cent. of the solid plate or strip.)

$$\text{W. P.} = \frac{1{\cdot}2 \times J \times (t-9)}{D} \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \text{Eqn. (78)}$$

$$t = 5 \times \sqrt{D} + 2 \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \ldots \quad \text{Eqn. (79)}$$

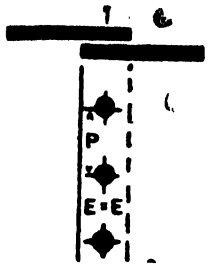
t is the thickness of the pipe in 100ths of an inch.

145. Cast Steel Pipes.—Pipes, bends, tee pieces, etc., of cast steel shall comply with the requirements of Regulations 140 and 141. The working pressure and thickness shall be determined by the formulæ under Regulation 141.

146. Flanges of Copper Pipes.—Flanges of copper pipes may be made of the usual brass or bronze or of wrought iron or of wrought or cast steel.



147. Flanges of Iron and Steel Pipes.—Flanges of iron and steel pipes may be made of cast steel, wrought iron or wrought steel made without a weld. The pipes may be expanded by rollers into flanges having a series of recesses formed within them or they may be screwed into the flanges with a disappearing thread. Flanges may be riveted, when practicable, to pipes of any size.

148. Welded and brazed flanges.—Flanges made of iron or steel may be welded by any suitable process to pipes made of wrought iron, ingot iron or tube steel, and if the flanges are made of iron or tube steel they may be welded to mild steel pipes. When flanges are attached to copper pipes by brazing or to iron or steel pipes by welding they shall also be secured in such additional way (e.g., by riveting the ends or forming a conical end so as to fit into a conical bore in the flange) that the resistance to withdrawal from the flange does not depend wholly on the brazing or welding.

PART II.

INSPECTION.

CHAPTER I.

Regulations for the Registration and Inspection of Boilers.

149. When an application is made for the registration of a boiler and when a boiler requires to be inspected under this Act, the following Regulations shall apply.

150. Preparation for Inspection.—(a) At every inspection of a boiler for the grant or renewal of a certificate, the boiler shall be empty and thoroughly clean in all its parts. All doors of manholes, handholes and sightholes and cleaning plugs and all caps in the headers and mud drums of water-tube boilers, all firebars, bearers, front plates, bridge plates, fire-bridges, brick arches, oil fuel burners and mechanical stoker fittings shall be removed. All valves and cocks comprising the boiler mountings shall be opened up and taken apart and the valves or cocks ground, when necessary, before the Inspector's visit.

(b) Provision shall be made for the removal of lagging or brick-work or other concealing part and for the drilling of plates, if required by the Inspector, and for verifying the pressure gauge and safety valve dimensions and weights.

(c) All smoke tubes, exterior of water tubes, smoke boxes, and external flues shall be swept clean.

(d) Provision shall be made for the effective disconnection of all steam and hot water communication with any other boiler under steam as prescribed in Part III of these Regulations. This shall be effected either by the removal of a length of pipe from the steam and feed piping or by the insertion of substantial blank flanges. Where blank flanges are employed, they shall be inserted between the flange of the chest and the pipe attached to it. No blank flange shall be inserted between a safety valve chest and the boiler.

151. Hydraulic tests.—Every new boiler shall be hydraulically tested in the presence of an Inspector.

152. Preparation for hydraulic test.—The chests of all mountings subject to steam pressure shall be in place and shut tight or blank flanged. The safety valves shall either be jammed down or removed and the chest-opening blank flanged. The attachment for the Inspector's pressure gauge and the nipple for connecting the Inspector's test pump hose shall be in order. All doors shall be properly jointed and tightened up. The boiler shall be completely filled with water, care being taken to allow all air to escape and, if possible, a preliminary test not exceeding the working pressure of the boiler shall be taken before the Inspector's visit, to test the tightness of the joints. When a boiler is hydraulically tested for the first time, it shall be entirely cleared of lagging or brickwork; at subsequent tests the lagging or brickwork, or portions thereof, shall be removed if required by the Inspector.

153. Procedure of hydraulic tests.—(a) Every new boiler shall be hydraulically tested in the presence of an Inspector to not less than twice the approved working pressure, when such working pressure does not exceed 100 lbs. per square inch; when the approved working pressure is above 100 lbs. per square inch, the hydraulic test pressure shall be 1½ times the working pressure plus 50 lbs. per square inch.

(b) The boiler shall satisfactorily withstand such pressure without appreciable leakage or undue deflection or distoration of its parts for at least ten consecutive minutes. If the test is not satisfactory the working pressure allowable by calculation shall be suitably reduced, unless the owner desires to make such alterations as will enable the boiler to withstand satisfactorily the hydraulic test; in this case after the alterations have been made the boiler shall again be examined, the pressure recalculated, if necessary, and the boiler tested to the satisfaction of the Inspector.

(c) At the first hydraulic test of a boiler prior to the issue of an original certificate deflection measurements shall be made before, during and after test of each furnace length, fire-box and flat end or other plates.

(d) After the application of the hydraulic test the Inspector shall carefully examine the boiler inside and outside and satisfy himself that it has satisfactorily withstood the test.

(e) In any case in which the safe working pressure to be allowed for a boiler cannot, owing to peculiar construction of any of its parts, be determined by calculation in the ordinary way, the Inspector shall, under the direction of the Chief Inspector, subject the boiler to hydraulic test for the purpose of determining the fitness of such parts. The amounts of the test pressure to be applied in such a case shall not exceed the test pressure prescribed for the least working pressure found by calculation for other parts of the boiler or the intended working pressure, whichever is less. Should any part of the boiler show undue deflection or indication of permanent set during the progress of the test, the pressure shall be released immediately such indications are observed. The working pressure for the part shall be 40 per cent. of the test pressure applied when the point of permanent set was reached. This procedure shall apply to any boiler at any test.

(f) Hydraulic tests of boilers at subsequent inspections shall, except when the Inspector expressly requires otherwise, be made after the inspection. The test pressure to be applied to old boilers shall be from one and a quarter to one and a half times the working pressure of the boiler.

(g) When the internal construction or size of a boiler does not permit of the Inspector getting inside it or of examining closely all its parts, he shall see it tested by hydraulic pressure to one and a half times the working pressure at each certificate inspection.

(h) Water tube, locomotive type and all tubular boilers shall be hydraulically tested at each certificate inspection, unless such test is waived under the orders of the Chief Inspector.

(i) The Inspector may, if he considers it necessary, apply a hydraulic test to any boiler at any inspection.

(j) Except in the case of small, portable and vehicular boilers which do not require re-erection or building in brickwork, the hydraulic test of all boilers shall be conducted only after the erection of the boiler in situ, and all boilers shall after re-erection in a position different from that in which they were last examined be hydraulically tested. A hydraulic test shall also be taken before granting an increased pressure certificate and after repairing a boiler, unless the Chief Inspector authorizes the Inspector to waive such test.

(k) When carrying out hydraulic test, Inspector shall use pressure gauges supplied by the Chief Inspector.

154. Steam tests.—(a) Every newly registered boiler and every other boiler of which the working pressure has been altered shall, before the issue of an original or renewal certificate for such boiler, be tested under steam to the satisfaction of the Inspector.

(b) At the time of the test the safety valves shall be left free and capable of being adjusted to the approved working pressure.

(c) After adjustment of the valves to the correct blowing pressure the boiler shall be tried under full steam and firing for at least ten minutes with the feed water shut off and the stop valve closed, during which time the Inspector shall note the accumulation of pressure and other details of the test as well as the loading and adjustment of the safety valves.

(d) On completion of the safety valve test the Inspector shall satisfy himself that the water gauges are in working order and that the feed apparatus is capable of supplying the boiler with sufficient water. Where the Local Government does not require a person-in-charge of a boiler to hold a certificate of competency, the Inspector may when he thinks fit satisfy himself by questioning or by practical test whether the person-in-charge of the boiler understands the use and purpose of the water gauges, the pressure gauge, the safety valves, the feed water-supply and blow-down.

(e) When witnessing safety valve tests, Inspectors shall use the standard pressure gauges supplied by the Chief Inspector unless the boiler pressure gauge has, since the time of inspection, been tested and found correct with an authorized testing machine.

(f) No steam gauge shall be used without a syphon filled with water between it and the boiler.

(g) When the accumulation of pressure at a steam test exceeds ten per cent. of the maximum working pressure, the area of the safety valves shall be considered insufficient, and a certificate shall be refused until the safety valve area is increased.

(h) An Inspector may, when visiting a factory for any purpose, verify the correctness of the safety valves and pressure gauge of any boiler under steam by comparison with his standard pressure gauge.

155. Procedure for registration.—(a) On receipt of an application for registration under section 7 (1) of the Act, the Inspector shall, when the boiler has been properly prepared for inspection, proceed to measure in complete detail all its parts, ascertain the working pressure allowed by the Regulations by making a series of calculations of the strength of the various parts, such calculations being based on his measurement and on the dimensions and other particulars relating to the material and construction stated in the maker's certificate, if satisfied with the correctness (vide section 14 (1) (c) of the Act and Regulation 4). In making his calculations he shall, after examination of the material, take due account of the workmanship and details of the construction of each part. In his examination the Inspector may, if he deems necessary, bore the plates or other parts to ascertain their fitness and in making his calculations he shall be guided by the requirements of Chapters I, II and III of Part I of these Regulations.

(b) If no formula or co-efficient applicable to any part is contained in Part I, Chapter III, of the Regulations, the Chief Inspector shall in his discretion determine the fitness of such part.

(c) The strength of the weakest part so calculated or determined, subject to any discretionary power exercised by the Chief Inspector, shall determine the permissible working pressure of the boiler. After inspecting the boiler and ascertaining by the prescribed calculations the maximum pressure at which the boiler may be worked, the Inspector shall hydraulically test and steam-test it in accordance with the requirements of Regulations 153 and 154 and may issue a provisional order in Form V under section 9 of the Act.

(d) The Inspector shall enter the above particulars and dimensions of the boiler and calculations of strength of the various parts, together with details of the hydraulic and of the steam tests, in a "Memorandum of Inspection" Book (vide Regulation 160) which, together with all the maker's papers for the boiler, shall be submitted to the Chief Inspector for approval of pressure before the issue of an original certificate under section 7 (5) and (6) of the Act.

(e) On completion of the first thorough inspection, measurement, hydraulic and steam test of the boiler, the Chief Inspector shall, if satisfied with the result, allot a registry number under section 7 (4) (a) of the Act and issue his orders under section 7 (5) of the Act (vide Regulation 162); but the registration and examination under section 7 of the Act shall not be complete until the engraving of the registry number of the boiler under section 7 (6) of the Act has been verified by the Inspector.

156. Engraving of registry number.—(a) The registry number of every boiler shall be cut in the front plate thereof in such position as shall be pointed out by the Inspector. The device for each Province shall be distinguished by the following letters:—

Assam	A.
Baluchistan	B.N.
Bihar and Orissa	B.O.
Bengal	B.L.
Bombay	B.Y.
Burma	B.A.
Central Provinces	C.P.
Coorg	C.
Delhi	D.
Madras	M.
North-West Frontier Province	N.W.
Punjab	P.B.
United Provinces	U.P.

The distinguishing letters shall be engraved above a number and separated therefrom by a horizontal line two and half inches in length. The letters and figures shall be one inch in height and of suitable breadth, provided that in the case of small boilers the letters and figures of the device may, in the discretion of the Chief Inspector, be reduced to $\frac{3}{4}$" in height. The whole shall be enclosed in a rectangle, the upper and lower sides of which shall be three inches apart and one quarter inch clear of the top of the letters and the bottom of the figures respectively as indicated below :—

B. O.

The side lines shall be equal distance clear from the figures. The engraving shall not be less than $\frac{1}{64}$th inch in depth.

(b) The engraving shall be complete and ready for verification within thirty days of the first inspection of the boiler.

(c) Boilers having registry devices differing from those prescribed herein shall, on these regulations coming into force, have such devices obliterated, altered or cut anew in conformity with those prescribed above. The original numbers of such boilers shall be retained in the new device. A number once allotted to a boiler shall not be used again for another boiler.

157. Measurement of heating surface.—(a) For the purpose of regulating the area of the safety valves and the amount of registration and inspection fees the "heating surface" of a boiler shall be the total surface of all plates and tubes exposed to heat on one side and in contact with water on the other, measured on the water side or the fire side, whichever is larger.

(b) For Lancashire and Cornish boilers the total heating surface shall include the wetted surface of the furnaces between the end plates, the fire space, the fire space of cross tubes where fitted, and the part of the external shell below the side flue covers. In estimating the areas furnaces shall be considered as plain cylinders; the area of their wetted surface shall be taken as their mean external circumference × the length of the boiler between end plates. For the shell the width of that part of the circumference below the flue covers shall be taken as = 2D, and this width × the length between end plates shall be taken as the area of shell heating surface. The part of the surface of the back end plate exposed to heat shall be omitted from the calculation.

Example.—The formula for the total heating surface of a Lancashire boiler having plain furnaces without cross tubes is as follows :—

H.S. in square feet = 2L (3·14d + D). L is the length of the boiler between end plates in feet, d is the mean external diameter of the furnaces in feet and D is the internal diameter of the largest belt of shell in feet.

(c) For steam and water drums of water tube boilers the heating surface of the drum shall be taken as half the external mean circumference multiplied by the clear length of drum between the outer brick walls or centres of cross boxes, as the case may be. The heating surface of the tubes shall be taken as the external surface of the inclined tubes between tube plates or headers. The heating surface of the headers shall be omttted from the calculation.

(d) For marine boilers of the fire-tube type the heating surface shall include the wetted surface of the furnaces between the tube plates (considered in the same way as for Lancashire boilers), the wetted surface of the combustion chambers (less the area of the tube holes) and the wetted surface of the tubes between tube plates. The parts of the front tube plate exposed to heat shall be omitted from the calculation.

(f) For vertical boilers of ordinary type the heating surface shall include the wetted surface of the fire-box above the foundation ring (less the area of fire-hole and ring and tube holes, if any) and the surface of any cross or other tubes and uptake below the lowest water level shown in the gauge glass.

(g) For any other heating surface not provided for in the foregoing instructions the same general procedure shall be observed.

(h) No deduction shall be made for stays, etc., in calculating the heating surface.

158. Boiler rating.—The boiler rating shall be the number of square feet (to the nearest whole figure) in the heating surface of the boiler as determined under Regulation 157.

159. Registration fee.—The fee for the registration of each boiler shall be :—

	Rs.
For boiler rating not exceeding 100	40
For boiler rating exceeding 100 but not exceeding 300 ...	50
For boiler rating exceeding 300 but not exceeding 500 ...	60
For boiler rating exceeding 500 but not exceeding 700 ...	70
For boiler rating exceeding 700 but not exceeding 900 ...	80
For boiler rating exceeding 900 but not exceeding 1,100 ...	90
For boiler rating exceeding 1,100	100

The registration fee shall cover the thorough inspection, hydraulic test, verification of registry number and steam test, subject to the provisions of section 14 (2) of the Act. In cases where the boiler has not been properly prepared, the Chief Inspector shall have the power to remit the whole or part of the additional fees required under the above section.

160. Memorandum of Inspection Book.—A memorandum of inspection book shall be prepared for each boiler in Form I. In this book the Inspector shall enter in ink all particulars and dimensions of the boiler with the calculations for the various parts in detail, particulars of hydraulic test and steam test and his inspection notes. At subsequent inspections Inspectors shall enter the dates of the inspections, hydraulic tests and steam tests, when such are made, with their notes thereon.

161. Registration Book.—(a) A registration book containing all the particulars required for registration shall be maintained in the office of the Chief Inspector in Form I and any orders passed by him regarding the boiler shall be entered in the registration book under his initials.

(b) The registration book, on a boiler passing from one part of India to another, shall, on the request of the Chief Inspector of the Province to which the boiler has been transferred, be forwarded to that officer who shall take over its custody and maintain it as prescribed above.

162. Grant of certificate.—A certificate for the use of a boiler shall be granted in Form VI. In the certificate shall be entered the maximum pressure at which the boiler shall be worked, the load to be placed on the safety valves or the thickness of washers on ferrules required as a safeguard against overloading, the date and pressure of the last hydraulic test of the boiler and, when applicable, of the main steam pipes attached to it.

163. Procedure at subsequent inspections.—(a) At subsequent inspections of a boiler, the Inspector shall gauge and record the circularity of furnaces of boilers having cylindrical furnaces. In Adamson type furnaces he shall take a vertical and horizontal gauging of at least the three first furnace rings and record the result in the Memorandum of Inspection Book. He shall sound gusset stay rivets to detect slack or broken rivets and shall examine gusset angles for fracture. He shall examine the water-side of the end plates around the shell lines, furnace flanges, and at the toes of gusset stays, and the bends of furnace flanges, and shall test screw stays and smoke tubes. He shall test the fit of all internally fitted manhole and other doors. He shall examine all mountings internally and externally. When any part is wasted and he is doubtful of its fitness for the pressure, he shall cause one or more small holes to be bored and from them ascertain the average thickness of the parts from which he can satisfy himself by calculation in accordance with the formula applicable to the part. Such gaugings and calculations he shall enter in the Memorandum of Inspection Book.

(b) In making calculations for a wasted part of a boiler shell, e.g., along the line of seating blocks of a Lancashire boiler, the Inspector shall use the ordinary shell pressure formula without J, the percentage strength of joint.

164. Repairs to boilers.—(a) Repairs to boiler shells shall be effected either by patching or by removing a strip of worn or damaged plate and inserting the new strip with covering straps over the longitudinal butt ends, the strength of the riveted joints to be not less than that of the longitudinal shell.

(b) Patches for fire-exposed plates shall be fitted metal to metal without joint of any description. The affected part shall be cut out, leaving the corners of the hole well-rounded. Patches shall be secured, wherever possible, by properly spaced rivets with at least a width of plate equal to the diameter of rivet between the edge of the rivet hole and the edge of the plate. Where riveting is impracticable, the plate shall be secured by well fitting countersunk headed screw pins.

(d) Stays cut out with an affected part of a plate shall be renewed and shall be fitted through the patch.

(e) Bulged or distorted furnaces of circular section may, if the bulge or distortion is not too great, be heated and pressed back to shape.

(f) Circular furnaces of horizontal boilers that have become distorted under ordinary working conditions to a greater extent than the thickness of the furnace plate, i.e., when the difference between two cross gaugings exceeds the thickness of the plate, may be strengthened by fitting anti-collapse rings round the furnace at the middle of the length of the furnace.

(g) Anti-collapse rings shall be of substantial section either of single or double angles bolted back to back with screw stays not less than $\frac{3}{4}$th inch in diameter and about 7 inches in pith passed through flat of angle and screwed into the furnace, the ends being either rounded or riveted over on fire side and fitted with nuts at the other. The stay bolts shall be fitted with ferrules not less than 1 inch in depth between furnace and angel ring.

(h) Welding shall not be accepted for the repair of any part of a boiler for which welding is forbidden for a new boiler under the Regulations. Boiler shells shall not be repaired by welding beyond the filling up of a small isolated corroded or pitted part or the making up of wasted edges of openings.

NOTE.—Cracks or grooving is dished or flat end plates of cylindrical shells or in the bends of furnace flanges in a circumferential direction may be filled up by welding to render them steam-tight, but such welding shall be reinforced by patch or other suitable means.

(i) Wasted parts of circular furnaces and fire-boxes and fire exposed flat plates as in rectangular fire-boxes and combustion chambers may be cut out and be replaced by new pieces welded in or they may be built up by welding. Longitudinal cracks in circular furnaces and fire-boxes and cracks in rectangular fire-boxes and combustion chambers may be welded.

(j) Where a part of a stayed flat plate is renewed, the stays affected shall also be renewed and be screwed from the new part as in the original. No stay shall be welded.

(k) The renewed parts shall be treated as parts of new boiler and must comply with the Regulations in force for the intended pressure.

165. Submission of plans of boilers.—(a) In the case of land boilers made in India or outside India for use in British India the Chief Inspector may, on receipt of a Treasury acknowledgment of the prescribed fee, receive for examination plans and particulars of materials, design and construction of boilers beforehand so as to avoid questions arising at the examination of the finished boilers.

(b) The Chief Inspector shall, after examination of the plans and particulars, furnish the proposers with his opinion as to whether he is satisfied with the design and fitness of the parts for the intended pressure or, if not, what modification may be necessary therein. When plans and particulars of boilers have been approved, the Inspector in making his examination shall see that the designs as approved have been carefully followed out and that the material corresponds with the approved particulars.

(c) The above procedure shall be followed in the case of extensive repairs or alterations to boilers, but no fee shall be leviable for the examination of such plans and particulars.

CHAPTER II.

Steam pipes.

166. Inspection of steam pipes.—(a) Steam pipes shall be inspected and hydraulically tested before erection in place, the test pressure to be that prescribed in the Standard Conditions for steam pipes. A certificate from an Inspecting Authority or a recognized maker stating that this has been done may be accepted. If the Inspector is satisfied with the test, the pipes may be erected in position; at the steam test of the boiler he shall examine them under steam pressure. No separate certificate for the steam pipes shall be issued, nor shall a separate fee be charged for their inspection.

(b) At subsequent inspections of the boiler or at any other time, the Inspector may make an external inspection of the steam pipes and for this purpose may require a part of the lagging at the flanges to be removed, and the pipe made bare. If as a result of this inspection the Inspector is of opinion that the pipes or any portion of them are in an unsatisfactory condition, he shall report the matter to the Chief Inspector, who may require the whole of the lagging to be removed and may require any pipe or pipes to be hydraulically tested. The test pressure at such hydraulic test shall be not less than twice the working pressure of the boiler.

(c) The date and hydraulic pressure to which steam pipes were subjected shall be entered in the certificate for the boiler and such entries shall be continued from time to time in the renewal certificates for the boiler.

(d) Steam pipes shall be fitted with suitable means of drainage. Pockets or low-lying bends, in which condensed steam is likely to collect, shall be prohibited. Efficient means for draining steam pipes shall be provided in every case. All drain cocks or valves shall be accessible and be so placed as to render it practicable to drain the water from any part of the steam pipes or chests connected with them. Drain pipes shall be fitted to drain cocks or valves when the latter are in such a position that the water or steam discharge from them is likely to cause personal injury.

(e) Suitable provision shall be made for expansion either by means of large bends or, in the case of long lengths of straight pipes, by expansion joints. The expansion joints of socket type shall be so fitted that the end of the pipe cannot be forced out by the action of the steam pressure or movement of the pipe.

167. Material.—The material test and working pressures of steam pipes are prescribed in Regulations 142 to 148, but the Chief Inspector may permit the use of cast iron steam pipes in exceptional circumstances as a temporary measure only for such period and subject to such conditions as he may direct.

168. Submission of plans of steam pipes.—Plans of steam pipes shall be submitted to the Chief Inspector before construction or at the time of registration of the boiler for his opinion whether the pipes and the arrangement will comply with the Regulations.

PART III.

SAFETY OF PERSONS INSIDE BOILERS.

169. Safety of persons working inside boilers.—(a) No person shall be sent or, with the assent of the owner or person in charge, go inside a steam boiler for any purpose whatsoever unless the boiler is effectively disconnected in the manner hereinafter prescribed from any steam or hot water communication with any other boiler.

(b) Effective disconnection shall be made either by the removal of the boiler stop valve or of a length of piping from all steam and hot water connections with any other boiler, vessel or pipe containing steam or hot water or by the insertion of substantial blank flanges between the boiler stop valves and piping. The shutting of a stop valve, stop cock or automatic isolating valve alone shall not be deemed to be compliance with this regulation.

(c) The owner of a boiler to which this regulation is applicable shall obtain the approval of the Chief Inspector in writing to the method of disconnection which he proposes to use and shall be responsible that the method so approved is followed in practice.

MONTHLY WEATHER AND CROP REPORT OF BENGAL FOR AUGUST 1923.

I. Character of the season.—During the month under review the rainfall was much below the normal in Mymensingh, Faridpur and in North Bengal districts; elsewhere it was generally in excess of the average. The usual rainfall statement is appended.

II. Progress of agricultural operation.—Transplantation of winter paddy seedlings and steeping of jute were being retarded for want of sufficient rain in parts of Mymensingh and North Bengal districts. Elsewhere the operations progressed favourably. More rain was required, especially in the highland tracts, for transplantation of paddy. Reaping of autumn paddy was well advanced.

III. State of standing crops.—The condition of deep-water paddy was satisfactory on the whole, although lowness of the rivers is reported in some places to have slightly prejudiced its prospects. Transplantation of paddy was most delayed in North Bengal, also in the highland tracts of Mymensingh and elsewhere.

IV. Prospects and probable outturn.—The prospects and probable outturn of standing crops were reported to be threatened by lack of rain in some parts of North Bengal and also in Mymensingh. Elsewhere the prospects were reported to be fair.

V. Damage to standing crops.—Damage to jute crop by insect-pests was reported from parts of West and East Bengal.

VI. Condition of agricultural stock.—The condition of livestock was generally fair. Sporadic cases of cattle-disease were, however, reported from parts of Nadia, Murshidabad, Jessore, Khulna, Birbhum, Midnapore, Howrah, Dinajpur, Darjeeling, Rangpur and Noakhali.

VII. Failure of pasturage and -No scarcity of fodder and water was reported from any part of the province.

VIII. Prices of food-grains.—During the second-half of the month under review the price of the common rice of the cheapest quality rose in all districts, fell in seven districts, and remained stationary in the rest of the province. It ranged from 6 seers 4 chitaks per rupee at Rangpur to 9 seers per rupee at Dacca.

IX. Condition of agricultural people.—The condition of agricultural population was reported to be fair.
